AMERICANS COMPLETE CONQUEST OF ATTU

Wuppertal Bombed in One of Greatest Raids

City of 411,000 Blasted by RAF; Many Fires Set

Thirty-Three British Planes Lost in "Concentrated Attack"

Chemical Plants and Factories Left Blazing, Fliers Report

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—More than 1,500 tons of screaming steel were dropped last night by the RAF on Wuppertal, another key point in Hitler's Ruhr arsenal in what was described as one of the heaviest bombing attacks ever made.

The city of 411,000 between battered Essen and Duesseldorf had never felt the dreaded bombs before and when the last British plane left, observers said, flames were shooting nearly three miles above the target.

The bombers were forced to bore through a pall of black smoke, wierdly lit from below by red and green explosions. The air ministry said thirty-three planes were lost in the "heavy and concentrated" raid which brought to a thundering climax the most terrific week of punishment ever inflicted on Germany.

Big Fleet in Action

If the usual ratio of losses to the total attacking force held true, it meant that the bomber fleet was approximately the same size as those which pulverized Dortmund and Duesseldorf with record 2,000-ton blows earlier in the week.

The fliers said German searchlights transformed the entire Ruhr valley into a blazing white pathway as the great armada roared over in the face of intense anti-aircraft fire and swarms of enemy fighters.

Once the raiders smashed through the outer defenses, however, the Nazi barriers failed completely. Wuppertal itself was found to be virtually undefended.

A.F. OF L. THREATENS GENERAL STRIKE OF BALTIMORE WORKMEN

Sympathy "Holiday" Planned in Behalf of Transit Company Men; Green Opposes Move

BALTIMORE, May 30 (AP)—The treat of a general American Federation of Labor holiday hung over Baltimore tonight as AFL leaders considered action to aid one of their affiliated unions in a strike against the Baltimore Transit Company.

Local radio stations during the day carried a call to all AFL leaders to attend a meeting tomorrow night "to consider a labor holiday in defense of Baltimore transit employes."

One radio station official said the call was authorized by President Harry Cohen of the City Federation of Labor, but Cohen was not immediately available for comment.

Green Opposed

The Baltimore Sun quoted National AFL President William Green as saying he "could not approve" the idea of a general holiday in sympathy with the strike called by the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes.

"I can't believe," the paper quoted Green as saying in a telephone conversation from Washington, "that the Baltimore Central Labor Union would take such steps or take such action. These are days when men must maintain their balance.

"A holiday or a strike is the same thing, regardless of what you call it," The Sun quoted Green.

Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin declared that a labor holiday was just another name for a general strike "and would be intolerable in a community that is so largely dedicated to the war effort."

Pledged Not To Strike

Robert J. Buxbaum, president of the state AFL which at its annual convention this week unanimously renewed a no-strike pledge, said he didn't want to comment, but added, "it sounds like a general holiday."

Buxbaum, who said he would attend the meeting called for tomorrow night, asserted that a general holiday would affect approximately 150,000 persons in Baltimore and surrounding areas.

Buxbaum said a labor holiday could mean any length of time—"even a year."

The strike, now in its sixth day, was called by the AFL union in an effort to force the transit company to comply with a War Labor Board directive ordering the company to reinstate certain discharged men, cease recognition of an independent union and recognize the Amalgamated in the settlement of grievances.

Company officials have termed the strike a failure, and asserted that operations are now at nearly 90 per cent of normal.

Plant Workers Are Victims of Mystery Poison

More Than 100 Made Ill at Danville, Va.; Cause Unknown

DANVILLE, Va., May 30 (AP) — Wide-spread poisoning of workers in the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills tiday sent five more patients to the crowded Danville hospitals as health authorities sought the cause of the illness striking more than 150 employees since Friday.

The five workers sent to the hospitals today brought to 102 the total hospitlized. More than fifty others have been treated in their homes.

Dr. L. O. Crumpler, mill physician, said "we have hopes the trouble has cleared up." The five new hospital patients, he said, had remained home until they became severely ill, and no new patients were brought today directly from the plants.

Every case is showing improvement, Dr. Crumpler said.

Basil Browder, assistant to the president of the company, said that many of the plants' 15,000 workers have become alarmed over the mystery and are staying away from their jobs.

"Although only the parts of the mills working on urgent government orders work on Sundays," Browder said, "we could tell the difference today. It may be serious tomorrow."

Samples of all food sold in the mills and of water from the plants' drinkin fountains have been sent by plane to Richmond for analysis.

Priority System Established for Truck Operators

Limited Number of Commercial Vehicles Will Get More Gas

WASHINGTON, May 30 (AP)—The Office of Defense Transportation established tonight a priority system to govern the granting of supplemental gasoline allotments to "a limited number" of commercial vehicle operators in the northeast.

For all operators not covered by the priority list, ODT said, the forty per cent in mileage recently ordered "probably will be continued for the rest of the year in the shortage area." This means that purveyors of "luxury" goods, such as beverages and flowers, cannot receive supplemental allotments.

The ODT said it expected that "only a limited number" of commercial vehicle operators will be able to qualify for additional gasoline. Very few of those who do qualify, the agency said, will receive a full restoration of the forty per cent cut, which is in effect from Maine to Virginia.

In order to obtain supplemental allotments under the priority setup, an operator must be:

1. A property carrier hauling supplies for the army, navy, maritime commission or lend-lease for export.
2. A passenger carrier furnishing vital public transportation service.
3. A property carrier serving the basic operations of an essential industry as defined by WPB.
4. A passenger or property carrier who can prove that services necessary to the war effort or the essential civilian economy would be unduly restricted without additional gasoline.

"Additional gasoline will be allotted only for essential commercial services which could not be continued under the forty per cent gasoline 'stretchout,'" ODT said. "Only services vital to the war effort and the public welfare can be fully maintained during the gasoline crises. Except for those operators entitled to supplemental gasoline rations under the priority system, the forty per cent mileage cut probably will be continued for the rest of the year in the shortage area.

Further Reduction Looms

"If it becomes necessary to extend the cut into the remainder of the year, gasoline allotments to commercial vehicle operators will be reduced automatically as the ration coupons for each calendar quarter are prepared.

"Proportionate adjustments will be made in the subsequent allotments of operators who qualify for additional rations during the current quarter."

In addition to the basic requirements listed in the numbered paragraphs above, ODT added, "the extent to which an operator has effected conservation and eliminated waste mileage will be taken into account in consideration applications for supplemental allotments.

"Conservation measures, in the case of trucks, would include engaging in joint-action plans with other operators, using the services of joint information offices in an effort to eliminate empty return trips, and so improving the efficiency of operations so as to eliminate as far as practicable all empty or partially loaded vehicle mileage.

"Half of the forty per cent was

"CONGRATULATIONS, ADOLF --- BUT DON'T ASK WHY!"

HAPPY BIRTHDAY (WITH TEARS) is expressed by Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, left, to Fuehrer Adolf Hitler on the occasion of Hitler's 54th birthday. According to the caption which appeared with this photograph in a German propaganda magazine from which it was taken, this meeting took place at Hitler's headquarters, presumably on the eastern front. Note how haggard Hitler appears and how his hair has grayed at the temples. There is also a suggestion of a double chin.

Nazis Kill Many British Children In Bomb Attacks

Bodies of 21 Recovered from Ruins of Church; Others Missing

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—The bodies of twenty-one children were dug from the ruins of a bombed church in a southwestern English coastal district tonight, hours after fifteen German Focke Wulf planes streaked in and wrecked the church, a hotel, and other buildings with bombs and machinegun fire.

Frenzied parents, digging with their hands in the wreckage extracted the twenty-one bodies, and kept on searching for the bodies of fifteen other children and three Sunday school teachers who were missing.

There was a number of other casualties when a hotel was hit, and when the streets were machine-gunned by the German fighter planes.

Machinegun Beaches

The British as usual refrained from identifying the town in their first announcements. A Berlin radio announcement late tonight, quoted the German news agency DNB, said that the southwestern coastal resort town of Torquay was raided today, and that four planes were lost. British reports told of the Nazis machine-gunning beaches.

In one of the beach incidents a film unit shooting scenes on the outskirts of the southwest coastal town was strafed. Stars and extras dropped to the ground, but spinning fragments injured several, including Arthur Askey, celebrated comedian who recently has been heard on British-American radio hook-ups.

SUSPECT SABOTEURS IN ATTEMPT TO WRECK FAST MONTREAL TRAIN

Sectionman Shot While Attempting To Replace Spikes He Found Removed from Tracks

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., May 30 (AP)—A railway sectionman was shot and wounded in what was believed tonight to have been an attempt of saboteurs to wreck the Canadian Pacific Railway's crack Montreal-Vancouver flyer.

Andrew Kosliuk, 50, the section worker, was fired upon from ambush when he tried to replace spikes that had been demoved from the track.

Provincial and railway police began an immediate investigation.

Kosliuk made the discovery thirty minutes before the passenger train, C. P. R. No. 1, was due today at the hamlet of Pawtek, ten miles west of here. The train was flagged down at Pawtek.

Kosliuk suffered bullet wounds in the left shoulder and was brought to hospital at Fort William.

Patroling the track, Kosliuk found that spikes had been removed from fifty feet of outer rail on a sharp curve where the track skirts a seventy-five-foot embankment along the Kaministiquia river.

He saw a man bending over the track at the curve, and as he approached, he told police, the man disappeared into the woods.

Kosliuk started to make repairs when shots were suddenly fired. He was hit twice in the shoulder, and one bullet went through his hat.

The track along the Pawtek division is an almost continuous series of curves, and for many miles runs close to the Kaministiquia river, far below.

Interviews Refused

Kosliuk was brought to a hospital here late today but police refused to permit newspapermen to interview him.

After he was hit Kosliuk staggered along the track and had gone about half a mile when he flagged down a light engine that was moving eastward.

Soon the flyer was heard approaching and the engine crew flagged it down.

Other sectionmen from Pawtek were sent to repair the track. Some of them told police that Kosliuk had reported two men were at the scene, a mile and a half east of Pawtek. One was wearing a gray suit, the other a darker suit.

The sectionmen said the shots were fired from the shelter of the woods, 150 feet from the track.

Tydings Urges Early Opening Of Burma Road

Would Save Lives of Many American Soldiers, Senator Asserts

BALTIMORE, May 30—(AP)—Immediate opening of the Burma Road, to get vitally-needed supplies to China's hard-pressed army, thus saving China as a fighting ally against Japan, would also save many American lives, Senator Millard E. Tydings (D-Md) said today.

In his weekly broadcast, the Maryland senator asserted that loss of China's fighting power would cost "many, many more American lives than would need to be expended by a more aggressive Pacific policy now by all the nations fighting in that theater."

Declaring he believed Senator Chandler's (D-Ky) advocacy in Congress of a more active war against Japan would bear fruit, Tydings said there must be a "spirit of give and take and of mutual helpfulness and consideration in the conduct of this war on all fronts."

He referred to comment by Chandler that while British, Russian and American troops were battling Germany in the European area, most of the Pacific warfare was being carried out by American forces.

This country, Tydings contended, has "pretty well demonstrated that we have done all we can on all fronts now."

He continued that "many persons in positions of high authority here in Washington feel that too little effort, up to the present, has been exerted toward bringing the far-

Japanese Admit Loss of Island To U. S. Forces

Tokyo Says Nips Fought Hard, Committed Suicide To Avoid Capture

Only a Few Isolated Snipers Remain Hidden on Island

WASHINGTON, May 30 (AP)—The American flag flew triumphant this Memorial Day over the rocky ridges of Attu island.

The Japanese base has been conquered by American troops in twenty days of bitter battling over snow-covered and fog-bound crags and valleys.

The island is the first American soil to be regained by our forces in this war after seizure by the enemy.

Admission of defeat came today from the Japanese Imperial headquarters in a broadcast communique.

Later in Washington the navy announced annihilation of the last large enemy force on the little island in the Aleutians chain. It gave no specific confirmation of the Japanese communique, but indicated victory in telling of an enemy counter-attack in the Chichagof valley at dawn Saturday, and adding:

Only Snipers Remain

"Except for snipers, this enemy force was annihilated."

That force, naval men said, presumably constituted the last large unit of the enemy garrison on Attu. One spokesman added that definite information on the final stages of the Attu battle may be available tomorrow.

Presumably the battle in the Chichagof valley was the engagement referred to by the Japanese, when they told in a Berlin-broadcast communique of a decision to "carry out a final blow against the enemy" on Saturday and added "it is thought that the entire number of our force has completely perished."

Japs Die Fighting

With characteristic attempts to idealize a defeat, the Tokyo radio later broadcast that "Japanese

Young Frenchmen Drafted by Nazis

[By The Associated Press]

All Frenchmen born in the year 1933 have been drafted for work in Germany, it was stated in an official announcement broadcast by the Berlin radio last night.

No exceptions are made to the new draft, said the broadcast, recorded in New York by the Associated Press. "Young people working on the farms and in other important trades also are drafted," it said.

Allied Commanders Meet at Gibraltar

MADRID, May 30 (AP) — A La Linea dispatch said today Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Allied commander in chief in North Africa, and French and British generals met last night at Gibraltar.

Conferring with Eisenhower, the dispatch said, were Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, his deputy commander in chief; Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery, head of the British Eighth army; Gen. Georges Catroux, a fighting French executive; and two other generals who were not identified.

Gen. Georges Joins Giraud in Algiers

ALGIERS, May 30. (AP)—Gen. Alphonse Joseph Georges, commander of all French armies on the Western front under Generalissimo Gustave Gamelin at the start of the war, has escaped his Nazi-occupied homeland and offered his services to Gen. Henri Giraud, it was announced today.

The 67-year-old strategist came to Algiers "direct from France," the announcement said. The method of his escape was not brought out, but he is one of the highest officers in the legions which have fled the continent to carry on the fight against the Axis.

Just where Georges will fit into the proposed unified French command was not announced. Gen. Charles De Gaulle is reported to have insisted that Giraud himself not continue as military chieftain of French forces while serving with him as co-chairman of the proposed new French Central Executive committee. Georges ranked both in the old French army.)

Georges, a "strong," serious commander, was prominently mentioned as a likely leader of all Allied land forces early in war before the Nazis invaded France.

Bombardier Defuses Jammed Bombs And Saves Ship, Crew and Himself

A NINTH U. S. AIR FORCE BOMBER BASE SOMEWHERE IN LIBYA, May 29—(Delayed)—(AP)—Lieut. Robert H. Austin of Campbell, N. Y., a Liberator bombardier recently saved his ship, himself and other members of the crew by sheer nerve and heroism in defusing a 2,000-pound bomb which jammed in the racks over an Italian target.

As the bomber, piloted by Lieut. Wallace C. Taylor of Upland, Calif., neared the target—a port in Southern Italy—it ran into a swarm of enemy fighters. Taylor commenced evasion action to shake off the Axis interceptors.

In the bomb bay Staff Sergt. Ralph M. Robins of Ossining, N. Y., assistant engineer, noticed that two 1,000-pounders were "hanging," one of them jammed in the rack. With the wind rushing through the open bay doors, its tail fuse started spinning.

Robins shouted to Taylor that "all hell is likely to break loose back here—a thousand pounder is jammed and her fuse is spinning."

Taylor passed the grim news on to Austin and at the same time stopped his evasion tactics for fear of jarring and setting off the bomb.

Austin crawled down the narrow catwalk toward the bombs—with the open doors under him and Italy 23,000 feet below.

Aided by Robins and Tech. Sergt. Alfred F. Turgeon of Ketchikan, Alaska, Austin battled against time. Taylor grimly held the Liberator on a steady, even course, watching the enemy pursuit planes on her tail.

Summing up the adventure, Sergt. Arthur B. Van Kleek of Brooklyn, N. Y., a gunner who also helped Austin defuse the bomb, said "that baby had our names on it okay, but just had them misspelled."

Five Nazi Submarines Sunk in Ten Days, British Air Ministry Says

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—Documenting official statements that the United Nations are meeting with mounting success in their war on the submarine menace, the air ministry announced today the destruction of at least five U-boats in ten days by giant aircraft of the coasal command engaged in dawn patrols of the Atlantic.

That five U-boats went down in sunrise funerals was clearly shown by the bobbing heads of at least 105 German sailors seen in the water around the stricken raiders, the communique said, while patches of oil and wreckage made it probable that several other kills had been scored.

"The battles provided new evidence, both of the power of air attack on submarines and of the strength of the U-boats' defensive flak," said the air ministry news service. "In all five cases the U-boats attempted to give battle on the surface with their guns."

At the same time the admiralty announced that four German trawlers were set afire, one of them blowing up and another left in sinking condition, and that two motor gunboats were set aflame in a fierce 45-minute engagement with light British naval forces off Dunkerque yesterday morning.

The British lost one of their boats, that of the commander Lieut. George D. K. Richards, but all the German forces were driven off and the enemy vessels were last seen firing wildly on one another, the communique said.

Inferentially admitting the hard task German submarines are facing nowadays, the German high command in its communique today said "our submarines in recent days

New Baltimore Police Commissioner Says He'll Direct Work from Field

BALTIMORE, May 30 (AP)—Inspector Hamilton R. Atkinson, who will take office on Tuesday as Baltimore city police commissioner, says he plans to direct the law enforcement department of the nation's seventh largest city largely from the field.

"I'm not much on sitting behind a desk," Atkinson said today in discussing his plans for the department, which he will direct following the retirement of Commissioner Robert F. Stanton tomorrow.

Atkinson was appointed yesterday by Governor O'Conor to a six-year term in the $10,000-a-year commissionership. He became the first Baltimore police commissioner in history who rose through the ranks.

"I want to know what is going on", he said today, "and the only way to know what is going on is to be out there. And I'm going to be out there."

The commissioner-elect said he had a number of organizational changes in mind, but that they would have to wait until he had settled himself in his new position.

German Bomber Attacks Convoy

LISBON, May 30 (AP) — A British convoy of merchantmen and corvettes was attacked by a German bomber off Sagres Point in Southern Portugal today.

One freighter was reported to have been hit and abandoned by its crew. The bomber was believed to have been damaged by anti-aircraft fire.

Americans Keep Up Pounding of Italian Islands

Enemy Air Power Practically at End on Two Main Islands

By DANIEL DE LUCE

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, May 30. (AP)—American warplanes maintained their fierce air siege of the Italian outpost islands of Sardinia and Pantelleria yesterday — and met no fighter opposition whatever after more than two weeks of knock out blows aimed at the enemy's air cover on these bases.

Although it was obvious that Allied aerial strength in the Mediterranean was growing day by day, yesterday's operations were reported on the smallest scale in more than a week.

Waves of Mitchells, Marauders and bomb-carrying Warhawks and Lightnings again attacked Pantelleria, the convict isle of the ancient Roman empire which has been consigned by Benito Mussolini to the ill-fated role of an Italian Malta.

Bomb Dock Area

The Americans took the dock area as their chief target. Fire and explosions were seen as the bombers raced across the objectives, and then the bomb-laden fighters swept over abandoned air fields to augment the previous destruction.

The twin-tailed Lightning fighters buzzed over Porto Ponte Di Romano in Southwest Sardinia, a keystone in the island Arc guarding the approaches to Italy, bombing buildings, piles of supplies at the docks and the railway that might be used to carry the stores away to dumps.

Not a single Allied plane was lost in these expeditions, the communique from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters said, and the destruction of only two enemy aircraft was reported today.

Meanwhile—photographic reconnaissance over Leghorn, bombed by nearly 100 Flying Fortress Friday in a raid reaching 160 miles beyond Rome, showed that a fierce conflagration had raged in the oil refinery, one of the largest and most important in Italy.

Several buildings were severely damaged, track and rolling stock in the railway yards tossed about and four ships hit by the falling Fortress bombs.

Berlin broadcasts of Rome reports today said six-story houses were levelled by the blasts, and that Count Galeazzo Ciano, former Italian foreign minister, and Zenone Benini, Italian public works minister, as well as King Vittorio Emanuele and Queen Elena, had visited the city. Leghorn is Ciano's home town.

Although Allied reconnaissance showed damage closely restricted to military objectives, the Berlin broadcasts claimed that Immaculata Church was destroyed, San Fernando Church badly damaged and numerous old palaces and dozens of tenement houses wiped out.

ages of nine and fifteen, were early arrivals for Sunday school classes. If the bomb had fallen ten minutes later, town residents said, the casualties would have been at least 100.

Between forty and fifty children of the infant school had assembled in the parish hall near the church, and these all escaped injury.

Thirty-nine children and five teachers were killed when a day raider bombed a school in the London district last January 30. Four months before, on Sept. 29, there were twenty-nine pupils and two teachers killed in a school at Petworth, Sussex.

Four Raiders Bagged

Four of the raiders which blasted the southwestern town today were brought down, and one caused further damage when it fell into the street.

The Nazis continued their raids tonight, twelve of the enemy craft making a low-level attack on two East Anglian coast towns at dusk. At least five bodies were recovered in one town and a number of other people were believed to have been killed. A Catholic church from which the congregation had just left received a direct hit. A mother and two daughters were killed when their home was demolished. One of the raiders was shot down into the sea and two others were believed to have been damaged by anti-aircraft fire.

were engaged in the severest convoy struggles in the Northern and Southern Atlantic which were waged by our U-boat crews with a daring spirit of attack and great embitterment."

The communique, recorded by the Associated Press from a Berlin Broadcast, went on however, to make the unconfirmed claim that fifteen Allied ships totaling 90,000 tons had been sunk in this warfare.

flung Japanese empire under attack."

Tydings added that "already there is a feeling in Washington that the high political leaders and their staffs recently in conference here have planned for a wider measure of activity against Japan for the days that are to come."

Japanese Admit

troops launched the final attack on Attu after shouting 'Banzai' for the emperor and making bows toward the Imperial palace in Tokyo."

That broadcast asserted that on May 27 — presumably Wednesday, North American time — the "Japanese ranks began to show gaps and on May 28, only a few more than 100 men remained and they sent a message to Tokyo saying: 'remembering the honor of Japanese soldiers, we are going into the fight and only death can take our weapons out of our hands.' "

The navy here said details were lacking on the size of the enemy force annihilated in the Chichagof valley battle, but an official communique asserted "preliminary reports indicated that the Japanese casualties were high." The navy has not used the term "casualties were high" to indicate small groups of men.

Final Battle at Dawn

The bitter and fierce battle on the valley floor came at dawn Saturday when the Japanese attempted a flanking movement apparently from the Fish-Hook ridge area, to the north and west of the valley.

Rifle-butts, bayonets, knives, even fists undoubtedly were used in the long hand-to-hand engagement that ended with annihilation of the Japanese force.

From the Japanese radio came another story of the battle — that "a gallant offensive" was made "so that the true nature of our imperial force can be shown to the enemy."

Communication with Attu, the Tokyo communique added, has been lost since the battle and "it is thought that the entire number of our force has completely perished. Those who were wounded and unable to participate in the offensive killed themselves preceding the final offensive."

A lack of communications also has delayed details from American troops on Attu, navy spokesmen indicated, and it was not considered likely that complete information would be available before tomorrow.

Mopping Up Remains

Despite wiping-out of the main Japanese force, it was indicated that snipers remained in rocky crevices of Attu's crags and that isolated machine gun nests still remained for mopping up operations.

With the conquest of Attu, American forces now are in a position to turn toward driving the enemy from Kiska, main enemy base in the Aleutians, or conceivably toward an offensive to the west.

The enemy has started an airfield on Attu and although definite information on its extent was not available here, military observers said it could readily be prepared for use by large bombing planes.

City of 411,000

other factories in the city had taken hold even before all the bombers arrived over the target.

Sky Full of Bombers

"We dropped our bombs and as we were leaving there were two huge explosions and a mass of flame," said one pilot. "In the red light I could see all sorts of bombers either going in over the target or coming away. The sky seemed full of them."

Another pilot, describing the great bank of fire apparently squarely in the center of the target, said that among the flames "huge explosions mushroomed up in bright flashes—sometimes red, sometimes green."

The Germans struck back weakly when about fifteen fighter-bombers dropped explosives at a place on the southwest coast of England.

This newest destruction in the heart of Hitler's war machine, following a triple daylight assault on enemy targets in Western France yesterday by the strongest force of American heavy bombers ever sent out from British bases, pushed the total weight of explosives dumped on Germany in a single week well past the 5,000-ton mark.

Wuppertal, a manufacturing city of 411,000 in the Ruhr-Rhineland area between Essen and Duesseldorf, is on the banks of the Supper river, a 65-mile stream which enters the Rhine eight miles below Cologne.

Site of Big Plants

Formed by the amalgamation of two towns, previously called Elberfeld and Barmen, the city is the site of the sprawling I. G. Farbenindustrie Chemical Workers and the C. J. Jaeger ball and roller bearing factories.

The air ministry communique said the raiders shot down two enemy fighters and that a British fighter patrolling over Belgium brought down a German bomber.

A German communique, broadcast by Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said the "population particularly of Wuppertal suffered losses" in the raid, which a later broadcast from Berlin said created "major damage."

The Berlin radio claimed that fifty-seven American and British planes, "most of which were four-engined machines," were downed by fighters and anti-aircraft fire in the past twenty-four hours.

Major Damage Admitted

Turning to yesterday's battering of Rennes, St. Nazaire and La Pallice in France by American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, the German broadcast admitted that "major damage" was done at Rennes and "strong points on the Atlantic coast." It claimed that 29 American planes were shot down and that only four German fighters were lost.

An authoritative British announcement said three enemy fighters were destroyed during attacks on the southwest coast of England this afternoon, two of them by anti-aircraft fire. "Four more enemy fighters were destroyed in offensive operations over northern France by our fighters, one of which is missing," the announcement said.

French Warships At Alexandria Held by Allies

Valuable Fleet Gives In to British and American Pressure

LONDON, May 30 (AP)—French warships at Alexandria have come under the Allied banner after lying immobilized since the fall of France three years ago, the Berlin radio declared tonight.

The report, not confirmed immediately by any Allied sources, quoted a French government announcement as saying "the fleet has given in to American and British pressure. Crewmen said they would join the Allies."

The Alexandria fleet consists of one battleship, four cruisers, three destroyers, one submarine and a number of small auxiliary vessels.

Battleship Included

The battleship is the Lorraine, a 30-year-old 22,000-ton ship with eight 13.4 guns. Three of the cruisers, the Dunquesne, Tourville, and Suffren, are 10,000 tonners mounting eight-inch guns. The 7,880-ton Cruiser Duguay Trouin is 20 years old and has six-inch guns. The destroyers are the Fortune, Basque and Forbin, and the submarine is the Protee.

The Paris radio said all units would go to New York to join the battleship Richelieu, which sailed there from Dakar, for refitting.

The Allies have been negotiating for months with Vice Admiral Rene Emil Godfroy, French naval commander at Alexander, for the ships, but Godfroy has insisted that Marshal Henri Petain's government was the legal authority in France and that the armistice must be honored. He had refused to align himself with either Gen. Henri Giraud or Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

Official sources in London declined to comment on the transfer report.

No Details Given

No details were given immediately by the Berlin broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, which stated that "the French government announces that the French fleet in Alexander has given in to the British."

Such an acquisition would leave the French warships immobilized at Martinique as the only French fighting force outside Metropolitan France which had not joined the war against the Axis.

The French warships at Martinique include the 22,000-ton aircraft carrier Bern, the 10,000-ton cruiser Emile Bertin, the training cruiser Jeanne d'Arc, and a number of auxiliary and merchant vessels.

The current negotiations at Algiers between Gen. Henri Giraud and Gen. Charles De Gaulle to form a united French front against the Axis might have influenced Admiral Godfroy to throw in with the Allies, especially since the meeting at Algiers has been advertised as virtually certain of success. Godfroy has been acting independently, but it is known that he has been in contact with anti-Axis French elements.

May Sway Robert

And a Giraud-de Gaulle agreement also might influence Admiral Georges Robert, French leader at Martinique, to join the Allied effort. Robert last April 17 said that he would join the United Nations only under the conditions of French unity "under one single authority vested with sovereign rights," and with the interests of the French Antilles safeguarded.

Much of the powerful French fleet was destroyed by the French at Toulon last November to safeguard their ships from falling into the hands of the Germans.

The 35-ton battleship Richelieu, three cruisers, three destroyers, seventeen submarines and many light units were ranged on the Allied side last December 17 when Dakar, French West African port came into the camp of the United Nations at the behest of the late Admiral Jean Darlan.

Liberty Ship Sunk; 39 of Crew Missing

LAS PALMAS, CANARY ISLANDS, May 30. (AP)—Eighteen survivors of the 7,191-ton Liberty ship James W. Denver, which was torpedoed in the Atlantic, were landed here today by the Spanish trawler Maruja. All were sent to a British hospital.

The James W. Denver, built at Baltimore this year for the War Shipping Administration, was sunk April 11. Ten survivors were picked up May 4 and were landed at Lisbon. At that time fifty-seven were missing. With rescue of the latest eighteen, presumably thirty-nine are still missing. The vessel was launched Feb. 27, 1943, at the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyards at Baltimore.

Russians Destroy 2,069 Nazi Planes

LONDON, Monday, May 31. (AP)—Russian airmen and gunners destroyed 456 German planes last week for a month's total of 2,069, Moscow disclosed early today amid reports of sharp air and land engagements in the widely separated Kuban and Leningrad sectors.

A midnight bulletin recorded by the Soviet monitor again refrained from giving any details of the Kuban fighting, which the Germans said had slackened somewhat since heavy action began last Thursday in a Russian effort to crash through to the Kerch Strait opposite the Crimea.

Maryland People Renew Pledge to Victims of Wars

Ceremonies Yesterday in Many Parts of the State; Parks Quiet

[By The Associated Press]

Residents of the Free State renewed their pledge that "these honored dead shall not have died in vain" at ceremonies yesterday and today (Mon.) honoring the men who fell in battle during this and other wars.

The Memorial Day observance was one of the quietest in years as most persons stayed at home over the two-day holiday, or took part in local ceremonies or in foot parades.

The ban on pleasure driving curtailed or forced complete cancellation of many scheduled tributes to the men and women who died to preserve the American way of life. Throughout the state, particular honor was paid to the families of men who have been casualties in the current war against the Axis.

Fewer at Resorts

Crowds at amusement parks and resorts in all parts of the state were reported to be smaller than they had been for a number of years, as the gasoline ban and other travel restrictions kept most Marylanders at home.

In Frederick, approximately 2,000 persons participated in a parade to one of the state's most hallowed spots—Mt. Olivet cemetery, where Francis Scott Key is buried.

The graves of 921 men who died in all United States wars were decorated in the Frederick ceremonies, which paid particular tribute to the author of "The Star Spangled Banner." Units of the state guard, the minute men, civilian defense, American Legionnaires, polise and others took part, and the principal address was delivered by Col. Herbert L. Brymes of Baltimore, member of the Third Service Command staff.

Volley with Shotguns

The exigiencies of the times were graphically illustrated by the volley fired in tribute to the dead. Members of a state guard unit fired the volley with shotguns, having donated all their rifles to the armed forces.

Nearly 1,000 persons attended a Baltimore ceremony held in the new national cemetery sponsored by thirty-five posts of the American Legion and auxiliaries. Charles T. Levinness, chairman of the Board of Correction, was the principal speaker, representing Governor O'Conor, who was unable to attend.

Observance at Annapolis

Two "poppy anchors" were lowered into the Severn river at Annapolis yesterday afternoon during a quiet observance of the holiday by the United States naval academy. The first anchor was a tribute to the men of the armed forces who have lost their lives in the service of their country. The other floral tribute was sponsored by the local chapter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

At Cambridge, representatives of a number of organizations paraded first to Long Wharf, where a wreath was dropped into the water to honor the navy dead, and then to the Cambridge cemetery to honor the army dead. No vehicles were to be seen in the parade.

While most of the ceremonies were held yesterday, still others were scheduled today, which was a legal holiday, with stores, banks, offices and other places of business closed for the day.

This evening, employes of the Fairchild Aircraft Corporation at Hagerstown will hold a mass prayer meeting in the City Park, asking divine guidance and protection for the men in our armed forces.

War Plants Operating

Although today was a legal holiday, most large industrial plants in the state maintained operations, turning out munitions and tools of war to aid the United Nations.

Such plants as the Glenn L. Martin aircraft factory near Baltimore and the Celanese corporation's plant at Cumberland were at full productive capactiy.

Crowds at the state's resorts were much smaller than they have been on previous Memorial days. Yesterday, President Charles H. Brice of the Betterton Chamber of Commerce said approximately 1,000 persons visited the resort over the week-end, as compared with a normal crowd of about 3,000.

In Baltimore, a comparatively few persons visited Gwynn Oak park and other city recreational sites.

At Ocean City, resort operators said they had the poorest Memorial day in recent years, and they blamed the small attendance on the pleasure driving ban. Ocean City depends entirely on bus and auto service.

Priority System

ordered into effect immediately for bus and taxicab operators by the ODT last week. Operators who are unable to maintain essential service under the reduction in gasoline rations may appeal for supplemental allotments.

"All appeals—whether from truck, bus or taxicab operators—will be considered by ODT district offices on the basis of individual operations and essentiality."

Gen. DeGaulle Is Given Ovation by People of Algiers

Will Meet Giraud Today in Effort To Bring About Unity

By EDWARD KENNEDY

ALGIERS, May 30 — (AP)—Gen. Charles DeGaulle arrived in Algiers today for final French unity talks with Gen. Henri Giraud, received a thunderous ovation from the public and announced that a new executive committee to govern the French would hold its first meeting at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The Fighting French leader said the committee would consist of a number of members which would head ministries similar similar to those of a government.

Before DeGaulle's plane touched ground at an obscure airport where Gen. Giraud awaited him, the North African military and civilian commander said recent conversations "have shown agreement has been reached between the French national committee in London and the French high command in Algiers."

Seeks French Unity

DeGaulle declared he had come to North Africa with "a desire and will to achieve unity of the French empire in this war."

"We know the feeling of the French people here and in those parts of the empire which were freed earlier," he continued. "They share the feeling that unity must be achieved immediately."

DeGaulle spoke to war correspondents amid the plush and draperies of his headquarters in a villa, surrounded by palm trees and looking over Algiers toward the sea.

He received the newspaper men shortly after 5,000 people had stood in the broiling sun for two hours to give him a rousing demonstration of support as he placed flowers at the monument to war dead in Algiers.

Robert Murphy, representing President Roosevelt, and James McCann, for the American Legion, also placed wreaths on the monument.

Cheered by Crowds

Cheers, clapping and shouts of "vive DeGaulle" went up in the great square when the Fighting French general appeared. After Decorating the monument at the top of a curved granite stairway, DeGaulle turned to the people with a salute in which he stretched both arms toward them. As he descended the stairs, the crowd burst into LaMarseillaise, putting emphasis on the line about the "day of glory has arrived."

The strong-willed generals, who are expected to achieve unity of all Frenchmen fighting the Axis, stared setting up an executive committee immediately to govern all their free countrymen of the empire until Frenchmen again can choose their government by free ballot.

Giraud Asks Action

The discussions started in an atmosphere of at least outward conciliation and with Giraud's statement that "this is no time for speeches, but for action for France."

Giraud, who escaped from a German prison fortress and from Vichy, is military and civil commander in chief in North Africa and has under his jurisdiction an army of 300,000.

DeGaulle, who has opposed the Axis from the somber days of the fall of France, heads the Fighting French National committee. Under his authority are French Equatorial Africa, Syria, Lebanon, Madagascar and islands in the South Pacific such as Tahiti and New Caledonia, wkhere United States troops have bases. He also controls the tiny islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, close to Canada.

Both Sides May Claim Victory In Tax Battle

Final Action This Week Not Seen as Positive Political Decision

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, May 30 (AP)—One of the bitterest congressional fights in years may end without political victory for either Democrats of Republicans if President Roosevelt signs the new pay-as-you-go tax bill, as administration leaders are reported to have been assured he will do.

Debated for four months, the current collection measure will go before the House and Senate this week for final acstion in a compromise form that Chairman George (D-Ga) of the Senate Finance committee said "eliminates it as a political issue."

Both sides sought to make political capital out of the bill—the Republicans through their sponsorship of the Ruml principle of abating a full year's taxes for everybody to get the desired current payments and the Democrats by striking back with charges their political opponents were seeking to discriminate in favor of the rich at the expense of the poor in advocating such "forgiveness" of past liabilities.

No Clean-cut Victory

As the bill finally came out of a joint conference committee of the two houses, however, it was in such form that neither side apparently feels safe in claiming it had won a clean-cut victory. Leaders of both parties said privately they are disposed to abandon it as a political issue if Mr. Roosevelt does not revive the question.

The Republicans got at least a part of their plan across, since the compromise abates a full year's levies for all persons with $50 or less tax. The Democrats forced the general abatement down from the 100 per cent envisoned by the Ruml plan to seventy-five per cent of the lesser of either 1942 or 1943 taxes for most of the remaining taxpayers.

Both parties can claim credit for the expectation that it will yield the treasury $3,006,000,000 more than the present law in the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

Both Seek Credit

Moreover, special provisions are made for members of the armed forces for which some legislators predicted credit will be claimed by both sides on the political stump. Under the compromise bill, a full year's tax will be canceled for all military personnel with 1943 basic government pay below the level of $2,600 for a single person and $2,700 for a married person.

With the tax bill apparently headed for disposition, congressional leaders hope to clear away important appropriations bills and point their legislative program toward a July-August vacation. Such a vacation would be the first real break in Congressional sessions for more than three years.

Administration lieutenants expressed confidence today they could clear the calendar of major bills by July 1.

Senate Minority Leader McNary of Oregon told reporters he is entirely agreeable to a summer recess, although Republicans in the past have shied away from a congressional adjournment because of the war. Before he left for a rest at Hot Springs, Ark., Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky said he hoped such a recess could be taken.

"Bumper Fracture" of Knee Is Only One Of Group of Careless Driving Injuries

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

In spite of the reduction in automobile traffic and the general warning against driving over thirty-five miles an hour, about one out of every ten drivers decides that the rules do not apply to him and, as a consequence, we have had no notable reduction in traffic accidents at all proportionate to what might be expected.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

With the promise of an increase in rubber for tires and a loosening of strict gasoline rationing in the East, we may expect an exacerbation in the senseless holocaust in traffic accidents.

We have a whole group of special kinds of injuries which have names attached to them that are stigmata of carless driving.

One of these is "bumper fracture" of the knee. Bumper fracture goes back as far as 1929. It involves the outer part of the leg, indicating that the unwary victim is facing sideways to the oncoming joy-rider. If it occurs just at the knee, it knocks the head of the tibia into the knee joint and against the head of the upper bone of the leg, producing an extremely nasty fracture.

The violence sustained is of the crushing type. In about one-half of cases an open operation is necessary to get the bones into adjustment and even so, some degree of deformity is almost certain to occur.

The period of disability is eight to ten weeks in bed in a plaster cast and after that weight-bearing is postponed for another two weeks, which means about three months out of circulation. So be careful in crossing the street and do not try to lock wills or horns with the fellow who is a quarter of a block away and coming at you with the exhaust open.

Car Window Elbo

Still another automobile injury is "car window elbo." This is obtained by the unwary driver or companion who leans on the window with the elbow sticking out. He passes a wide truck or another car too close and receives what he thinks is a mild swipe on the elbow. The pain is not usually very intense at the moment of receiving the injury; but unless medical attention is received promptly, it usually gets to be quite a serious condition, a state of shock coming on and the arm becoming rapidly useless.

The commonest cause of this fracture is sideswiping by another car, the next commonest is by the overhanging edge of a truck, and some are sustained by striking the side of a bridge. In one case a man was struck as he signalled to make a left turn.

Penalty for Carelessness

The penalty for this kind of carelessness is extremely high under any circumstances. The fracture is a very serious one and difficult to reduce and in one series of cases reported from a Southern hospital, fifty per cent of the patients required amputation of the arm. In about one-third of the cases there were nerve injuries which resulted in a partial paralysis of the arm.

This report is not intended to shock or distress any reader, but simply to warn again that in a high-powered machine the necessity for caution and self-protection is correspondingly increased.

Uncle Sam spent $20,000,000, used 18,000 troops and lost 2,000 lives in the seven-year war against 1,000 Seminole Indians.

From a height of 5,000 feet a person can see eighty two miles, and from 25,000 feet, 194 miles.

Charley (Red) Ruffing won 258 games while losing 216 in his big league career.

Yes, This Cat Has Lived Long Enough

THE BYRD COMMITTEE of Congress is making another commendable effort to rid the people of the expensive and superlative National Youth Administration. It is to be hoped that it will be successful.

The committee, which is devoting great energies toward cutting nonessential government expenditures, cannot see why $59,304,000 should be spent on an agency which, it says, "duplicates or overlaps" the work of "six other government bureaus." It also duplicates and overlaps the work of the public and private vocational schools. There isn't a single thing it is doing, or is attempting to do, which cannot be done by other institutions and agencies, or dropped altogether.

This particular effort of the Byrd committee will not be easy. The NYA has lived like the proverbial cat with its nine lives and, bulwarked with the power and influence of the bureaucrats, it has managed to hang on, now, of course, in the name of the war emergency. Whenever anybody has tried to kill this cat, official Washington and the New Deal clackers have raised their hands in holy horror and yeowled to the high heavens in self-righteous defense.

But the Byrd committee thinks it would be a good thing for it to end its useless existence the coming June 30, which marks the end of the federal fiscal year. The burdened taxpayers undoubtedly agree with that objective. Kitty is too expensive a luxury at this time.

Question Answering 'A Costly Nuisance

IT IS TO BE HOPED that the movement against bureaucratic questionnaires will not weaken, although the bureaus are so strongly entrenched that the task seems well nigh impossible.

The requirement has been excessive to the point of absurdity and furnishes strong argument for a reduction of the swollen bureaucratic personnel, the greater part of which is causing a deplorable unnecessary expense to the taxpayers.

For a specific instance, there may be cited the case of a Middle West manufacturer, who recently received forty-two pages of forms and memoranda for his lawyers and accountants to fill out and notarize on a transaction involving a government order for ninety felt washers at a total cost of only $5.

For an overall example, there is the appalling record that between July, 1941, and December, 1942, well over 7,000 different government forms were required to be answered by the public. OPA alone, for example, requested data on 7,715,229 report forms, exclusive of rationing forms and instructions. Much of this was probably necessary, but a lot of it was not.

The Byrd committee on nonessentials in government expenditures has tackled this nuisance, and some other congressional steps have been taken. But a lot remains to be done, and one of the best ways of achieving the desired end would be to do some real whacking at bureaucratic personnel.

Nazi Railroads Face Breakdown

ACCORDING TO the Ministry of Economic Warfare in London, Germany controlled 180,000 miles of railroad track and 65,000 locomotives at the outbreak of the war. Extra track was taken over after the plunge into Russia, but the loot in locomotives was disappointing.

Transportation by rail was one of Germany's weakest links in the last war. Hitler knew this when he was laying his plans for the conquest of Europe. But der fuehrer, confident of the superiority of roads over rails, failed to profit from the errors of his predecessors.

The Swiss have testified to the desperate condition of Germany's railroad transportation system. The Swiss still do business with the Germans and send their rolling stock across the border. They never know whether a car will come back in one month or six or whether it will return at all. Apparently the Germans borrow rolling stock until it is on the verge of a complete breakdown and then return it to let the Swiss make repairs.

As the Ministry of Economic Warfare points out, German timetables do not look bad until it is realized that ordinary passenger traffic is at a standstill. In England the question remains, "Is your journey really necessary?" In Germany there simply are no trains.

It is obvious why British and American bombers let fly whenever possible at Germany's weak point—its railroads. But, as the ministry explains, the work of bombs and of saboteurs against the tracks is of minor importance. Rails can still be repaired overnight. Germany's real problem lies in ordinary friction, the wear and tear on its dwindling supply of locomotives.

The Allies are sensibly striking their hardest blows at Germany's repair yards at Rouen and at Rennes and at the Templehof yards. They realize that such attacks will speed the deterioration caused by Germany's real enemy, the exhausting effect of total war.

Hitler's Next Blow Likely in Russia

THOSE who consider the war as good as over may be due for a shock. The news from the long Russian front indicates that the Germans are massing tremendous forces. Some well-qualified observers believe that the Nazis are preparing to throw everything they have available at the Russians in one more desperate attempt to crush the Soviet armies.

Germany is not beaten by a long shot. Hitler has suffered a great many losses in recent months. The loss of Africa was painful. The disturbances in the occupied countries have sapped some of his strength. But the Nazis still have an immensely powerful army, well trained and well equipped. Many crack Nazi divisions are deployed at strategic points on the continent, ready for the expected Allied invasion. But the bulk of German strength is apparently being massed for another smash at the Russians.

Unless the Russians are far weaker than their claims indicate, Hitler will suffer a fatal defeat. From then on Germany's fight will be the convulsive writhing of a dying nation.

A Big Job but Necessary

AT ITS ANNUAL CONFERENCE just held at Omaha, the National Association of County Officials adopted a resolution asking that federal agencies be decentralized in order to make the facilities of agencies and bureaus more readily available for the use of the people and local governmental agencies they serve.

So long as the New Deal is in power, so long as it can manage to resist the opposition of the minority, little decentralization of federal bureaucracy is to be expected. But the recommendation represents one of the foremost jobs for the post-war period, or any period prior to that in which the New Dealers can be effectually curbed, if the original concept of American government is to be restored. It is a big job, but necessary.

The Japs are now in the throes of discovering that invading the Aleutians wasn't such a hot idea, either.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

George Jessel's autobiography, "So Help Me" is so bad, if you read it as literature, that Jessel must have written it all by himself with no ghostly aid. As a self-portrait of a man, however, it is so good that it expresses an entire era in our civilization and you shouldn't miss it.

Marshall Maslin

Jessel's life has been terrific, colossal, stupendous — and as Bill Saroyan says in his introduction "exciting"—and it does everything but lay an egg. He is vain, as all actors should be or are; he is egocentric; he is shallow; he is bumptious; and his morals are nothing to tell mother about. (The Browser is guilty of no libel here. It is all set down in unctuous detail in Mr. Jessel's own book).

Also his wit is of the corniest variety; he plays bridge with Thaw on a transatlantic liner, then looks up at the florid architecture of the ship lounge and quips that "my bridge partner shot the wrong architect".

His taste is atrocious. He thinks that one of his acts in which he portrays a poor half-blind lecturer from Czechoslovakia is one of the greatest monologues ever written. He admits that he is unable to keep the love of the woman he marries—either they weary of him or his misconduct disrupts their marriage. He heads for a bar after his marriage with Norma Talmadge is ended by her; weeps into nine drinks and tells his sad story to a strange married woman he'd never seen before and boasts that she followed him to New York by 'plane three hours later.

Even adjectives are worn coinage to him. He describes Miss Talmadge as "a lovely lady" who was his one great love; and also refers to a girl who is traveling around with an ex-pug—as "a lovely lady" . . . And Saroyan's introduction is marked with reluctance to say anything more than the book is exciting.

Men, as all the women declare, know nothing about women. Then how does it happen that it's usually the men who write the truest novels about women? And how is it that the novelist of today, who writes most accurately about women is Booth Tarkington? (If one excepts Miss Storm Jameson of England, and she, of course, has what the men like to describe as a "masculine mind"). If any woman present disagrees, let her read Mr. Tarkington's most recent novel "Kate Fennigate" (Doubleday Doran)—a wise, honest story of a woman who is richly American and somewhat given to "advising and managing" and who never completely understand that when you try too persistently to change your husband (or wife) you are criticizing him and "the last person on earth a man can stand to be criticized by is the woman he's in love with". . . . A solid novel, somewhat lacking in excitement.

The story of America from the first English settlement to today's war is unrolled in George Hummel's "Joshua Moore, American" (Doubleday Doran), a long, rich story of the Joshua Moores who lived through three centuries of our life—all physically mighty, all strong of character, all leaders of their fellows in all our wars and all our peacetime struggles. Rich in incident, with considerable narrative skill, and an inspiring book for Americans.

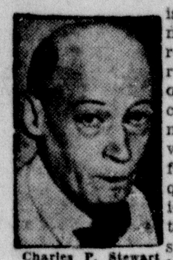

Hillis Lory's "Japan's Military Masters" (Viking) is a compact analysis and history of the place of the army in Japanese life—carefully integrated part in which the soldier is supposed to represent the noblest impulses and ambitions of Japan. It should be required reading for all American soldiers—and civilians. Mr. Lory knows Japan inside out. . . . Enough from Marsh Maslin,

Russian Radical Trend Modified, C. P. Stewart Says

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Before the United Nations' spokesmanship was prepared to express itself very definitely concerning Russia's abandonment of Communism as an international policy, recommended to radicals the world over, with Moscow as the movement's global revolutionary hub, a few days were required for the idea to soak into the comprehension of democratic leaders elsewhere on earth

Charles P. Stewart

This isn't surprising. Comrade Stalin was so abrupt with his declaration that probably he realized it would come as a jolt, both to capitals that would regard it as a beautiful present and to others that would interpret it as a kick in the pants. In fact, my impression is that Joe deliberately saved up his surprise until the last minute, as a welcome gift to the democracies and as a correspondingly disorganizing jab at the totalitarians. He proceeded thus, anyway.

Changed a Lot

Russian radicalism has changed a lot since I first encountered it in days quite a while before World War 1.

I was European correspondent for American newspapers at the time, with headquarters in London. Living there in exile at that juncture was Prince Peter Kropotkin, leader of his anti-czarist countrymen. He was in touch with his home group, but had to associate with it at long range or face a firing squad in short order, for, as I've previously intimated, the czar was still potent in the Muscovite realm.

I presume there had been subversive activity in Russia prior to Prince Kropotkin's generation, but it hadn't been much organized. He systematized it. As a newspaperman, I made his acquaintance, and, through him, established some extremely useful journalistic contacts with "Red" elements not only in his own land but also in various additional parts of Europe and on the Turkish side of the Bosporus, where revolution already was simmering.

Intellectual Type

Prince Kropotkin was the intellectual type of a "crimson." He was a delightful chap. His title dated back to some era in the distant past and he greatly deprecated it — but it stuck by him. I called him "Pete" and he took it as complimentary, coming from a radical, which was how he classified me.

Well, I did sympathize with radicals in comparison with czarist Russians and old-fashioned Turks of grim Sultan Abdul Hamid's regime.

I don't go so far as to indorse all Russian revolutionary methods. Those boys were perfectly candid bomb-chuckers. They approved assassination of suitable selectees. Indeed, they assassinated a considerable number of 'em.

In short, anarchy, as a political title, was their motto.

Concepts Despotic

Today's Nazis, Fascists and Spanish Falangists have their own ideals of government—pretty much like one another, but affiliated. Their concepts, however, are despotic in their various ways. Communism, though, is a good deal looser. Primarily its absolutely anti-governmental. That is, it's absolutely no government at all — no legislation, no administration, no police, no taxes, no anything whatever.

Even Communism doesn't go this far.

Anarchy does. Prince Kropotkin resurrected it, dating it back to early Christian times.

Before Prince Kropotkin's time, in the mid-1800's, when anarchy began to be discussed as a practicability, Karl Marx dissented.

He had to dissent from the Prince Kropotkin conception. Marx believed in a modicum of regulation.

Division Demanded

Then, in Russia, came Leon Trotsky.

Nikolai Lenin ensued. There's got to be a certain division of varying societies argued.

Further modification follows under Premier Stalin.

Joe remains a Russian Communist, but he doesn't insist now on making it world-wide.

Just what Communism is remains a problem.

Comrade Stalin has his concept of it. He wants it adopted all-around.

Yet he doesn't insist on it at one gulp.

It's lucky for the democracies that he isn't Prince Kropotkin, Leon Trotsky or Nikolai Lein. None of them would have compromised. Comrade Stalin is more up-to-date.

GETS HAWAII POST

MAJ. GEN ROBERT C. RICHARDSON, Jr., of Charleston, S. C. has been named to take over the Hawaiian department command. He will replace Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons to whom other duties have been assigned. Gen. Emmons took charge ten days after the Jap attack at Pearl Harbor.

A SALUTE TO OUR TREASURED MEMORIES

Communism Not Yet Dead

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Psychologically, the effect of Moscow's announcement that the Commintern has been dissolved is entirely good from a United Nations standpoint. Its timing was excellent. It will tend to lessen the effectiveness of the most potent propaganda gun in the Axis arsenal. It should serve to improve relations between Russia and her allies.

It would be well, however, for Americans not to wax too enthusiastic over the affair. After all, it is performance rather than promise that is important. For while the announcement suggests abandonment of the idea of a world revolution in behalf of Communism centered in and controlled from Russia, it remains to be demonstrated whether or not this will be the policy actually pursued.

Taken at its best and most promising appraisal, the announcement doesn't mean the end or abandonment of Communism, either in Russia or elsewhere. At most, it means that the Soviet has renounced world revolution as one of its objectives. And the fact, as we have said, remains to be demonstrated.

Communism will continue to control in Russia. Communism remains alive and active in the United States, in England, in many other non-Russian countries. And there is no suggestion that there will be any letup in the activities of these now supposedly independent organizations. So far as the United States is concerned, no technical change in organization will result. Theoretically, at least, the Communist Party in the United States already had severed its connection with the Commintern. But this separation did not produce any appreciable difference between Communist objectives here and those in Russia. Independence of action or divergence in activity may or may not follow now.

World Food Board with Uncle Sam as Paymaster Is Believed To Be Brewing

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, May 30 — The stern and complete secrecy with which Mr. Roosevelt has hooded the international food conference has inspired suspicion out in the country that he has some great international plan which he desires to try out and keep quiet for a time.

Paul Mallon

Around here, the commonly accepted inside story, however, is that the conference is relatively unimportant, but that Mr. Roosevelt chose the opportunity to set a precedent against free press coverage of later more important post-war peace conferences.

It is related FDR was greatly pleased with the secrecy of the Casablanca conference (which was strictly a military conference, incidentally) and that he would like to follow through on that line.

There is a better reason than either of the above. The conference is under the management of our agriculture department economists, thinkers and planners.

Astounding Ideas

In charge of the technicians for us is Paul Appleby, the under-secretary of agriculture, an old pal of Vice President Wallace in the little-pig-slaughtering days, and a man who started Mr. Wallace on his political career to the vice presidency.

These planners of ours have worked on a most astounding series of new ideas. Most people would call them fantastic, and even the planners themselves would concede they are fascinating and interesting.

For instance, they have an idea for an international two-piece system. Each nation would have a domestic price, but sell in the international market at a reduced subsidy price.

This country, for instance, would have a certain price for wheat within its borders. The government would buy this wheat at that price and sell it to China for whatever it could get—to improve the diet of rice-eating Chinese.

Uncle Sam Paymaster

The cost would be footed by the people of this country through the treasury. But the agriculture planners do not think it would cost much money as they did some experimentation along this line before the war.

A wholly new idea of their's is to get France, for instance, to stop wheat production, or curtail it, and turn to vegetables, buying her wheat from us. They would like to do this with all of Europe, particularly Italy where Mussolini made strenuous unsuccessful efforts to make Italy self-sufficient.

Presumably, we would have to give them the wheat as they have nothing with which to pay, but the idea of the planners that the price which our people pay, would make the other nations dependent on us and Britain for wheat and other products, and thus lessen their likelihood of going to war.

These are obviously variations of the old Wallace theme of furnishing a quart of milk a day. They apply not only to wheat, of course, but to all staple commodities.

Fantastic Angles

Their ideas lead them into fantastic social ramifications. If Britain undertakes to supply wheat to India and raise the standard of living and improve the diet there, it will have to get some kind of agreement from India for birth control, as obviously, it cannot continue indefinitely to feed an ever increasing population on credit.

If these matters were the subject of daily discussion in the press, you can readily see what might happen to Hot Springs food conference. As matters stand now the secrecy ban, the planners are able to discuss to their hearts content.

Technically, they can make no commitments. None of the governments involved have authorized their delegates to make promises, but they have all sent surprisingly important officials or technicians to the meeting. The British delegation for instance, is headed by Richard Law, permanent under-secretary in the foreign office.

Permanent Board Likely

The conference seems primarily designed to organize a permanent international food board which will consider and manage programs along the line of the above mentioned—and more.

The decision for secrecy was the president's own. The State department, which is in charge of press publicity at the conference, has repeatedly tried to open it up.

Whatever improvements have been made (first allowing the press in the grounds of the hotel and then later in the hotel itself from 6 to 9 p. m.) was accomplished by State Secretary Hull going to the White House.

Those Who Will Not See

From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Some weeks ago, the country was startled by revelation that California labor unions had prevented the use of spray guns on certain defense painting jobs. The purpose, of course, was to provide more work for painters using the traditional brush method.

The department of Justice obtained indictments against seventy-eight individuals in these cases, union members and contractors. These indictments, charging the defendants with restraint of trade, were promptly dismissed by a district judge who had ample law to support his action.

Now it is being proposed that Congress be asked for legislation outlawing, within the limits of interstate commerce, union rules which obstruct trade by creating jobs and preventing the use of labor-saving machinery.

It is easy to see the dangerous lengths to which legislation of this sort could go; the restrictions on freedom of action a precedent of the kind would make possible. Yet labor unions by their stubborn adherence to restrictive practices, and by the attitude of so many of their leaders during the past decade or so are inviting just this sort of governmental action.

Apparently, most union men in places of leadership are blithely unaware of the gathering storm of public reaction they are creating. The danger is that when this storm breaks it will sweep away, not only the unmerited privileges and abuses of union activity, but with them the hard won legitimate rights of organized labor. Yet those who warn of the danger are denounced as "labor haters."

Roosevelt Takes Different Tack With New Board

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, May 30.—President Roosevelt has tried again to get order out of chaos. He has reshuffled the machinery and set up a new board. Again it is called a "super-board." And again it is an over-all agency designed to straighten out the mixups between agencies and co-ordinate the un-co-ordinated.

David Lawrence

The president deserves the sympathy of the country in the problem he is trying to solve. For what he really is up against is the difficulty of curing incompetence without firing the incompetent, salving the feelings of his friends and personal chums in public office who are not fitted to manage the war machine, and yet preserving harmony in the official family at a time of serious crisis in the nation's history.

WPB Plan a Failure

Congress—at least that part of it which is vocal—is just as enthusiastic about the proposed plan as it was in January, 1942, when, with the same fanfare and ballyhoo, it was announced that a War Production Board had been created and that Donald Nelson had been given complete authority over everything. At last, the comment ran, the president has centralized everything and delegated authority to one man in one place. The executive order was far-reaching. It included any and all agencies of the government. But it didn't work. The reasons why are a matter of general knowledge in Washington.

Now the president has adopted a slightly different tack. He has placed on the shoulders of amiable, hard-working, honest and conscientious Jimmy Byrnes the task of compromising or adjusting the many differences that have arisen between the various officials in war agencies, each of whom has some segment of either statutory power or executive blessing with which to carry on the war effort on the home front.

Responsibility Centered

Again the president has delegated responsibility to one man. It is true that Mr. Byrnes is going to have a cabinet of advisers, but they are merely to advise. His is the responsibility under the president. In that new war cabinet are Harry Hopkins, Donald Nelson, the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy, and the newly appointed Judge Vinson, who takes Mr. Byrnes's place in the Office of Economic Stabilization. This means, as a practical matter, that the under-secretaries of war and navy, Messrs. Patterson and Forrestal, will probably sit in the advisory meetings and that the whole thing will be run hereafter as before by the President and Harry Hopkins, between whom there is a closer friendship than between the president and any member of his peace or war cabinets.

The purpose of the new super-board from a functional standpoint is not administrative but policy-making. This is a step in the right direction. Yet on the board are men with immense administrative responsibilities—the secretaries of war and navy and the chairman of the War Production Board.

Progress in Prospect

Some day the idea of a board or cabinet of men freed from detailed administrative responsibilities and engaged solely in policy-making will take hold, and when that happens we shall make real progress in trying to organize the national government.

The new set-up means, of course, that each of the war agencies and boards, like those handling manpower or price-fixing or oil regulation or rubber conservation or reconstruction finance, will go along their accustomed paths. But when they enter the area of the unclarified and unspecified powers that touch on the war effort in general, they will have to get their cue from Jimmy Byrnes who, in turn, will learn what the president wants done and issue the proper directives or decrees or edicts. For the saddest part of wartime Washington is that Congress has ceased to supervise the disbursement of funds or the operations of administrative government to insure that the statutes are being obeyed or that orders that go beyond the statutes are not issued.

Better Liaison

Incidental to the announcement of the Office of War Mobilization is the fact that the president is trying to establish a better liaison with Congress. Mr. Byrnes is a former member of the Senate, and Judge Vinson was a powerful member of the Ways and Means committee of the House till he accepted a place on the federal bench here. Both men can work with Congress, and the president needs help in that direction. He wants to free himself to concentrate on the overseas job and on the increasing number of problems of diplomacy as well as strategy.

The wish of everyone of us here is that the new plan may succeed.

Young Men To Get Practical Training In Farm Work

Former Tucker County Farm Is Chosen for Schooling of VFV

PARSONS, W. Va., May 30—Non-farm youths, aged 16-24, who are selected to aid farmers of the state in obtaining peak production of 1943 crops, will be given actual practical training on a 300 acre farm in Tucker county under the direction of the West Virginia Agricultural Extension Service and the vocational agriculture division of the West Virginia Department of Education.

The farm, at one time the "county farm" and more recently a farm camp of the National Youth Administration, will be used to train the Victory Farm Volunteers—non-farm boys chosen from high schools for work during the vacation period as well as other youths, aged 16 to 24, who are not in school—under the terms of an agreement between the extension service, and the National Youth Administration, according to C. P. Dorsey, assistant extension farm labor supervisor in charge of the Victory Farm Volunteers.

The equivalent of about two weeks instruction and practical training will be given the youths in such farm jobs as the care of horses, chickens, dairy cows, and hogs, planting, cultivation and harvesting of field, garden and truck crops, and the maintenance and repair of farm machinery and equipment. Safety practices will be stressed, Dorsey says.

The NYA will provide the farm facilities, lodging, food, and transportation of the boys from the homes throughout the state to the camp. The extension service and the vocational agriculture division of the state department of education will have charge of the training of boys at the camp.

The first group of the Victory Farm Volunteers will be trained at the camp soon, and plans are to continue the training program throughout the summer. About eighty boys can be taken care of at one time, but the number to be actually trained will depend on the need for the type of worker as expressed by farmers themselves, he stated.

Farmers throughout the state who will need help are asked by the extension service to visit the camp soon, see the boys in training, and help select the ones they want to work on their farms. Wherever possible, the VFW state supervisor says, the boys will be placed on farms near their homes or their home counties.

Meanwhile, extension officials handling the farm labor program are urging farmers get in touch with their county agricultural agents, and farm labor assistants and make applications for the type of labor they will need for full time, part-time, or seasonal work this year. Boys or adults not working who would like farm jobs are also asked to report to the county agricultural agent's office in their county.

Approximately eighty-four boys will be brought to the farm over the week-end.

Harry S. Appel Is Electrocuted On Trolley Wire

Local Man Contacts 440 Volt Charge in Ice Tank In B. and O. Yards

Harry Schley Appel, 40, 109 Cedar street, refrigerating engineer, was electrocuted on a trolley wire in the ice tank operated by the City Ice and Fuel Company in the Eastbound yards of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at 6:30 p. m. yesterday.

Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy county medical examiner, said death occurred instantly. Appel suffered third degree burns of the thumb and fingers of his right hand, third degree burns of the third, fourth and fifth fingers of his left hand, third degree burns across the palm of his left hand and second degree burns across the inner surface of his right forearm.

Climbed on Rail

F. C. Myers, superintendent of the City Ice and Fuel Company, said that no one knows how the accident happened. He said that Appel apparently climbed up on a rail and in some manner came in contact with the trolley wire on which a crane operates. The wire carries a charge of 440 volts.

Appel, who had been chief beer at the establishment for past five years, was termed a careful man" by Myers.

As soon as the accident occurred, Russell Leasure, an employe working with Appel cut off the current, Myers said. William Fletcher, foreman, notified the company superintendent of the accident. Appel was taken to Memorial Hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Occurs in Freezing Tank

The accident occurred in the tank where ice is frozen for use in refrigerating B. and O. cars, Myers said. The wire which Appel touched carries the crane that moves ice from the freezers.

Appel was a son of John and Nancy Potts Appel and is survived by his widow, Mrs. Gladys Golden Rinker Appel, four sons, Harry, Joseph, Robert and Paul Appel, all of Cumberland; four daughters, Misses Elizabeth, Nancy, Margaret and Carolyn Appel, all of Cumberland; one step-son, Stanford Zollner, Cumberland; two brothers, Charles and George Appel, Cumberland; one half-brother, John F. BARTON SOLDIER WRITES TO LEAGUE

A letter from a Barton soldier fighting in the jungles of New Guinea reveals that the dispute between the miners and operators has penetrated to that far-off battle front.

"I see by the Guinea Gold (service newspaper) that the miners' strike has been postponed for two weeks," says Corp. Joseph Davis in a letter to the headquarters of Allegany County Letter League. "And I sincerely hope they can get everything settled without fighting among themselves," adds Corp. Davis, who springs from the mine-studded terrain of Barton, the son of Mrs. Jane Davis.

On a philosophical note Corp. Davis opines "If we could fight the Japs as hard as we argued about money the war would soon be over."

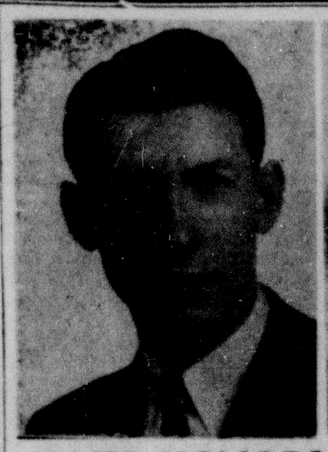

"I am very delighted to hear," his letter continues, "that the Celanese Corporation and union got together without causing any trouble."

Corp. Davis describes the Guinea Gold as a four-page newspaper, eight and one-half by ten inches in size, published daily on the island where he is stationed. Incidentally he says he's looking forward to receiving the League's next V-mail news letter which will be dispatched the first of next week to over 600 county men serving at posts beyond the continental United States.

Names may be added to the League's mailing list by calling 2216, or writing to League headquarters at 7 Washington street.

Gunter Uses Local Military Hero As Subject of Graduation Address

Says "Red" Wolford Answers Query on Chances of Success

"What chance—what possibility—does any member of this graduating class, after six years of training at Allegany high school, have to succeed in the enforced work that lies ahead of him?" was the question posed by William A. Gunter in his address to Allegany graduates at commencement exercises last night.

Then with Lieut. John Louis "Red" Wolford as his subject and recipient of a biographical "Letter to a Hero," Gunter proceeded to answer his question in one of the most unusual addresses presented to a graduating class.

"I think I have found the answer to my question in the case of a 1936 graduate of this school, who has been in our American Air Forces for little more than two years," Gunter declared, "and who to me typifies the product produced by this school; John Louis Wolford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Baird Wolford, was one of 216 to receive his diploma from the stage of the Strand theater on Friday, June 19, 1936."

Reviews Accomplishments

After briefly reviewing the accomplishments of "Red," as Lieut. Wolford was known here, which made him a hero whose name and picture have appeared in many metropolitan papers in the country, Gunter read a letter from the local boy which he said revealed not how "Red" had become a public hero, but rather showed only his modesty, disclosing that the "men who do the big things in life are least inclined to brag about it."

Then in his letter to Lieut. Wolford, the speaker gave an account of his investigation to find out of "what stuff heroes are made. . . what a small city such as Cumberland thinks of its boys who are fighting overseas and winning medals for bravery."

Gunter gave an account of the interviews he had with "Red's" summertime employer. Postmaster James C. Shriver, who said of the boy who had delivered special delivery letters about eight years ago . . ."altogether of wholesome appearance—the result of good health and right living"; with his high school principal, Ralph R. Webster, whose comment was 'definitely a fine type of school citizen", with his physician, Dr. Samuel Enfield, who took time out to say ' "Red" Wolford? There's a boy for you! Next to my boy, he was the best boy in the world.'

Church Made Impression

From Lieut. Wolford's minister, the Rev. George E. Baughman, Gunter said he received the comment "The church has made a vital impression upon the life of Louis; and, in all the struggles through which he has passed, he has given evidence the influence of the church was very much alive in the heart and soul of this young hero.' And among the words of Gene Gunning, sports editor, when queried about Red, were 'There is no better example of the part played by the wholesome athletic programs of our public schools in the development of young Americans of spirit, loyalty and courage than the career of Lluet. Louis "Red" Wolford. . .'

Recounting the characteristics of "Red" as his parents, who were trying not to brag about their boy, remembered them. . .his love of life, his good personal habits, his little weaknesses, his purposefulness, his sense of humor, his "girls", his thoughts of the future. . .indicated by words written in his Testament at the age of 14 on the day he graduated from Green street junior high school — "Where will I be ten years from now, June 15, '33?" and his favorite hangout, Ford's drug-store on Baltimore street. . .Gunter told his hero that he understood why a swell American like him would want to take his stand on Cumberland's main street.

Council Is Asked To Overrule Orr

Hoenicka Makes Request after Commissioner Countermands Order

Commissioner of Police and Fire James Orr and Fire Chief Reid C. Hoenicka engaged in a brisk debate yesterday when Hoenicka appealed to the mayor and city council to overrule a decision by Orr which stopped the chief's order that all firemen must have written permission from him if they wished to leave the city on their time off even to tend to Victory gardens.

Hoenicka said that with each fireman getting two days off a month and vacations starting the force would have only thirteen men on duty instead of seventeen as at present. He said he issued the order so that the men would be available in the event of an emergency.

Orr said the order smacked of Hitlerism. Finance Commissioner William E. McDonald interrupted the debate to say that he thought a man's time off was his own. One point was agreed upon by Orr and Hoenicka and that was that $72,000 of the $75,000 allotted to the fire department was for salaries.

Blue Ridge Bus Lines Make Drastic Cuts in Transportation Schedules

Changes Become Effective Today, Beginning of Holiday Weekend

Drastic reductions in service of the Blue Ridge Bus Lines will become effective today, the beginning of a long holiday weekend that "normally taxes the equipment of the company to the limit," company officials announced last night.

The exact changes in schedule were not available last night but company representatives urged people who must travel "to be sure and check with local bus offices as to changes."

May Easily Grow Worse

The reductions in schedule are in compliance with orders of the Office of Defense Transportation made necessary by the gasoline shortage in eastern states, and a company spokesman said it is hoped the cut will be of a temporary nature but pointed out the situation "may easily grow worse before it improves."

Orders of the ODT require that "no person shall, during any calendar week, operate in the area in which this order is applicable a greater number of motor vehicle miles than eighty per cent of the total motor vehicle miles operated by such person in such area during the week ending May 22, 1943."

That week was a normal week, officials of the Blue Ridge Lines said. Applied against a period, they added, when traffic nearly doubles, it may represent a cut of as much as seventy per cent in the Blue Ridge service usually operated.

For that reason, company officials urged that no trips be made by anyone unless absolutely necessary. Undoubtedly, they said, many travelers are going to be "left stranded" because of inability to handle them.

Ask Public's Co-operation

In a statement made by officials of the company they asked "co-operation and understanding of the traveling public" and pointed out that "bus people regret as much as anyone the necessity for this curtailment, but at the same time, realize it must be made as a part of the war effort. It is for that reason they believe that travelers will realize that the bus companies are trying to do the best they can under the circumstances and that bus people sincerely regret any individual hardships that will undoubtedly be worked in some instances.

They account for the faraway look in Jerry's eyes.

Brooklyn Painter Is Electrocuted At Post Office

Reuben Malkin Contacts High Tension Wire Back of Federal Building

A 28-year-old Brooklyn, N. Y., painting contractor, was electrocuted at 11:25 a. m., yesterday when he contacted a high tension wire on a pole in the rear of the federal building. He died instantly.

Dr. Linne H. Corson, deputy county medical examiner, identified the man as Reuben Malkin, 9720 King's highway, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Malkin, according to Dr. Corson, was standing on a transformer while painting conduits when he contacted the high tension wire which officials said carried 2,300 volts. The Potomac Edison Company line feeds current into the federal building.

Shock of the current, Dr. Corson explained, threw Malkin from the platform and he fell fifteen feet to the concrete highway, suffering a fractured skull and crushed chest in the fall. These injuries, however were secondary to the burns, the medical examiner said.

Malkin's burns, Dr. Corson stated were unusually severe and penetrated the flesh to the bone. He suffered three large burns, one on his left shoulder, another on his left elbow and the third on his right foot.

Taken to Allegany hospital by Detective B. F. Gaffney and Officer F. A. Shober, Malkin was pronounced dead by Dr. Corson after Dr. James T. Johnson, Jr., had made futile efforts to revive him.

Malkin returned to Cumberland Thursday night from Frederick with one of his workmen, Salvatore Aliecchi, to finish the painting job at the post office. Aliecchi said the work was finished except for touching up the conduits.

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris notified the contracting firm. The body is at Stein's funeral home.

State To Retain All-Clear Signal

Such a Change Would Lead to More Confusion, OCD Officials Opine

Maryland's all-clear signal terminating blackouts will continue to come over the radio and residents will be signaled by the turning on of street lights, at least for the time being, according to word received here from Baltimore.

Use of an audible all-clear signal, recommended for New York, will not be adopted in Maryland, according to spokesmen for the Third Service Command.

Terry Proposes Change

Maryland officials were sounded out on the matter after Maj. Gen. Thomas A. Terry, commander of the Second Service Command, recommended the use of an audible signal to denote the end of an air raid provided the signal does not exceed ten seconds.

General Terry pointed out that the use of an audible all-clear would "put an end to some of the present confusion" and declared that it would not violate the army regulations since those regulations did not forbid use of an audible all-clear so long as there was no possibility of conflict with other signals.

Maryland OCD officials believe that changing the signals again would only lead to more confusion as they have been changed twice already.

Would Mean Re-educating

Changing the signals again would mean re-educating the entire population again and lead to senseless spending of taxpayers' money to get out new educational matter, is the opinion expressed by Baltimore OCD officials.

Army and defense officials agree that for the time being Maryland's air raid signals will remain intact. The blue signal denoted by a long, steady blast, red by a series of short staccato blasts will continue to be followed by the all-clear on the radio.

Theaters Today

"Road to Morocco" Stars Lamour, Crosby, Hope

Now playing at the Garden theater is "The Road to Morocco," starring Dorothy Lamour, Bob Hope and Big Crosby. One of the best in the "Road" series the three have been making, the picture is full of preposterous nonsense, and as funny as it can be. Hope is again the past master at throwing lines away and leaving the audience to catch both lines and breaths at his audacity. Dorothy Lamour and Donna Drake are more than adequately stunning, with the added attraction of Lamour's singing. Bing Crosby, of course, makes the most of his singing comedy role. The music includes "Moonlight Becomes You," "Aint Got a Dime to My Name," "Constantly" and "The Road to Morocco."

The co-feature at the Garden today is a thriller, "Seven Miles from Alcatraz", starring James Craig and Bonita Granville.

"Silver Skates" Has Spectacle and Music

One of the screen's most dazzling ice spectacles is "Silver Skates," now at the Liberty theater, with featured roles in the hands of Patricia Morison, radio singer Kenny Baker and the world's finest figure-skating star, Belita. Other important parts in this lavish extravaganza are played by Frick and Frack, outstanding comedy team of the ice; national champion Eugene Turner, Irene Dare, Danny Shaw and Joyce Compton, and music for the entire production is furnished by Ted Fio Rito's orchestra.

Georgia Wildcats Come To Maryland Tomorrow

Slim Bryant and his Georgia Wildcats, well-known radio aggregation from KDKA, will appear at the Maryland theater tomorrow and Wednesday. Slim and his Wildcats have been on the air for several years and have made radio friends all over the country.

Among those featured in the show besides the trio are Kenny Newton, Pennsylvania boy, known as the champion fiddler of the east. Kenny recently won second place in the national championship contest in Columbus, Ohio. Kenny also sings and is well known for "Freight Train Blues" and "Der Fuehrer's Face." Loppy Bryant is the master of ceremonies, plays the bass fiddle and sings in the trio. Slim Bryant furnishes laughs, plays guitar and provides novelty numbers.

Skilled Workmen Can Enlist in Army Engineers

A voluntary induction procedure has been established by the United States Army Engineering Corps through which skilled specialists in various trades can continue their trades while serving with military services.

The corps offers a variety of eighty-two openings for which construction men, mechanics and technicians may volunteer. Enlistments will be accepted by selective service boards if applicants volunteer before their draft numbers come up. This holds for men between 18 and 38 years of age.

For men between 38 and 50 application may be made by writing directly to the District Engineer, United States Engineer Office, First and Douglas streets, Washington, D. C.

Classification of finger printing was established in 1892.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

UNAUTHORIZED TALK

NOT ONLY is it proper, but it will pay you in the long run to give serious attention to what you say during the period of the auction. Unauthorized conversation which gives your partner information about your hand should be penalized, and is penalized, under the laws of the game. The same is true regarding exposure of certain cards, and as to calls made after the auction is closed. Here is the way the new Laws of Contract Bridge treat those matters:

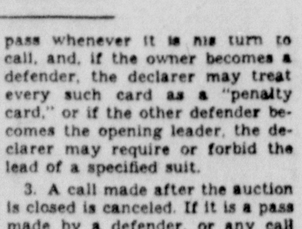

1. If, during the auction, a player makes a remark which discloses to his partner the nature of his hand, or his intentions or desires, or the presence or absence of a card in his hand, regardless of the size of that card, the penalty is that the opponent at his left may require the offender and his partner to pass whenever it is their turn to call, and the authorized opponent may require or forbid the lead of a specified suit when first it is the offending side's turn to lead.

2. If, during the auction, a player faces a card on the table or sees the face of a card belonging to his partner; if there is only one card, lower than a jack and not prematurely led, there is no penalty, and the card, if detached, may forthwith be picked up; if the card is an ace, king, queen or jack, or if it is prematurely led, or if there are two or more cards, either at the same or different times, the owner's partner must pass whenever it is his turn to call, and, if the owner becomes a defender, the declarer may treat every such card as a "penalty card," or if the other defender becomes the opening leader, the declarer may require or forbid the lead of a specified suit.

3. A call made after the auction is closed is canceled. If it is a pass made by a defender, or any call made by a contractor, there is no penalty. If it is a bid, double or redouble made by a defender, the declarer may announce that he will impose a lead penalty when next it is the other defender's turn to lead, at which time he may require or forbid him to lead a specified suit (in an appropriate case, this includes the right to call the opening lead.)

White Sox Knock Washington Out Of First Place

Pale Hose Sweep Doubleheader, 5-2 and 5-1, before 22,000 Fans

WASHINGTON, May 30 (AP)—The Chicago White Sox knocked Washington out of the American League lead with a double win over the Senators, 5-2 and 5-1, before 22,000 fans today.

The Chisox exploded for three runs in the second to sew up the opener. Thurman Tucker led the attack with a single and a triple. Big Bill Dietrich was the winning hurler.

The Senators sent Vernon (Lefty) Gomez against the Sox in the nightcap, but the former Yankee ace showed little of his old-time stuff. He was touched for four runs and as many hits before leaving the game after pulling a shoulder muscle in the fifth. Gomez walked five men before Rae Scarborough relieved him.

Thornton Lee mastered the Senators throughout the second game. He gave up only six blows and never was in serious trouble after the first, when Washington produced a run on Stan Spence's double, a passed ball and Jimmy Vernon's single.

Don Kolloway hit a double and two singles for the Sox. Tucker connected for two singles and drew a walk to score three Chicago runs. The scores:

Athletics Annex Two from Browns

PHILADELPHIA, May 30 (AP)—With Rookie Pitcher Don Black twirling a one-hitter in the opener and Jess Flores chalking up his seventh consecutive victory in the second game, the Athletics swept a doubleheader from the St. Louis Browns, 3 to 0 and 4 to 1, before 21,254 at Shibe Park today.

Vernon Stephens, who leaves the Browns tomorrow to take an army physical examination in Long Beach, Cal., singled in the fourth inning for the only hit against Black, a right-hander from Richmond, Va. The A's had slugged Bob Muncrief for five hits and all their runs in the first inning.

In the afterpiece, Flores yielded seven hits, three of them to Stephens, who fanned for the third out with the bases filled on his last time at bat. A single by Stephens scored Chet Laabs in the fourth inning.

Singles by Elmer Valo and Jo Jo White started a two-run attack against Ostermueller in the first inning. Hal Wagner singled the third run home in the sixth and Dick Sibert knocked another across in the seventh. The scores:

The Centerville (Pa.) Reds remained unbeaten in the Pen Mar Baseball League yesterday, ringing up their second straight victory by pushing across a run in the fifteenth inning to defeat Westvaco tossers, 6-5 at Memorial Park, Westernport.

Wellersburg surged into second place by turning back the Queen City Brewers, of Cumberland, 9-5, on the North End Playground field. The setback dropped the Brewmen and Westvaco into a tie for the cellar position.

The thriller at Westernport was a pitching duel between Ival "Speed" Lambert, of Centerville, and Elmer Hoffman. Lambert allowed eleven hits in going the full route and struck out eleven. Hoffman also lasted the distance and gave up ten blows.

Pete Cook Leads Reds

The Reds scored the deciding tally when Pete Cook doubled but was caught at third when Earl Drenning hit a grounder to shortstop. Drenning moved to second on the play at third and then reached home on Glen Streett's single.

Pete Cook sparked the Pennsylvanians with four hits while Thomas Michael lashed out a double and single for Frankie Sullivan's Westvaco aggregation.

Cumberland's Brewmen outhit Wellersburg thirteen to twelve but a combination of errors and poor base-running on the part of Queen City spelled defeat.

Gene Fritz, who went the route for the Pensylvanians, was hit hard but excellent support and his ability to fire the third stripe across nine times pulled him out of difficulty.

Lou Stitcher twirled a better brand of ball than the score indicates and in addition, banged out three hits in as many trips to the platter. Bill Stevenson, Brewer outfielder, had four blows in as many attempts and made a beautiful catch of Charles "Snow" Walter's line drive in the fourth.

Walters Relieves Stitcher

Charles Robinette, Wellersburg's diminutive right fielder, featured the winners' attack with his two singles coming just when they were needed. He drove in one run in the second inning after two hands had been retired and started out a five-run rally in the seventh when Wellersburg was trailing 5-3.

Stitcher gave up ten of Wellersburg's hits before being relieved in the seventh by Mike Walters, who finished the contest. The only extra-base blows of the game were two doubles by Wellersburg's Neal Robinette and a two-bagger by the Brewers' Eddie Diehl.

Bucs Hand Phils Double Setback To Take Fourth

Nightcap Goes Ten Innings -- DiMaggio Singles Home Winning Run

PITTSBURGH, May 30 (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates shot into fourth place in the National League today by sweeping both ends of a doubleheader from the skidding Phils, 4 to 3 and 2 to 1, before 7,279 fans. The nightcap went ten innings, with Vince DiMaggio singling home the winning run after two men were out.

The twin setback extended the losing streak of the Philadelphia club to six games.

The Bucs hopped on Schoolboy Rowe for three runs in the eighth inning of the opening game to enable Truett (Rip) Sewell to chalk up his fifth victory against one defeat.

The second game was a pitcher's duel between Wally Hebert, Pittsburgh's only southpaw, and Rookie Jack Kraus. The Bucs picked up a run in the fourth and the Phils tied it up in the fifth. There was no further scoring until the last of the tenth, when the Bucs bunched three singles for the winning tally.

In their return to the first division, the Pirates have taken five out of their last sox games. The score:

Medicos Discover Greg Rice Really Is Super Human

Middle Distance Runner Astounds Doctors in Research Tests

By HAROLD CLAASEN

NEW YORK, May 30—(AP)—Super human is what opponents of Greg Rice have been calling the middle distance runner the last two years and an examination at a New York university medical research laboratory proves they are about ninety-eight per cent correct.

In some respects the stubby runner with sixty-five consecutive victories definitely is super human.

By the charts in the clinic, no human is supposed to be able to take in more than 4,000 cubic centimeters of oxygen during a full minute's breathing of ordinary air. Yet Rice gulped down slightly more than 5,000 cubic centimeters in that time. And when the medicos switched to pure oxygen, it didn't trouble him a bit.

May Meet Haegg

Rice, whose next outing likely will be against Sweden's Gunder Haegg in the National A.A.U. 1,500 meters here on June 19, has a normal pulse of 60. As he started on a two-minute jaunt on a stationary bicycle, the heart beat dropped steadily for twenty seconds until it reached forty-eight before climbing slowly to sixty-four. A half minute's rest brought the pulse to normal.

But it was in a test to determine his ability to stifle fatigue that Rice, now a chief boatswain's mate in the merchant marine, really cracked all known records.

Goes Lash One Better

The human circulatory and respiratory systems combine to bring oxygen to the muscles and when the breathing apparatus is overtaxed and unable to deliver the oxygen needed for the burning of the glycogen to continue the exercise, fatigue sets in. Or, to put it simply, one feels tired when the blood stream owes a debt of oxygen to the muscles.

The doctors figure that the ordinary human will collapse if that debt totals 8,000 cubic centimeters and many scoffed when Don Lash, former Indiana runner, showed he could build up a debt of 21,000.

But Rice goes Lash 1,500 cubic centimeters better—his registered debt limit is 22,500.

Yanks Win Pair From Cleveland To Regain Lead

New Yorkers' Chances of Staying on Top for a Time Are Good

NEW YORK, May 30 (AP)—The New York Yankees unscrambled the traffic snarl at the top of the American League today by sweeping a doubleheader from the Cleveland Indians before 50,671 customers at Yankee stadium while the Washington Senators were losing twice to the Chicago White Sox.

This put the Yanks in first place beyond dispute and with a good chance of staying there for a time, since the rival Washington and Cleveland clubs open a series with each other tomorrow.

Today's games were each decided by one run, 4 to 3 and 3 to 2, and the margin of victory in the nightcap was a homer by Roy (Stormy) Weatherly with two out in the ninth inning.

The Yanks took charge early in the first game, starting with Joe Gordon's fourth home run of the season in the second inning. In the Third Gordon drew a walk off Lefty Al Smith with the bases filled to force in a run and in the eighth they scored twice on a double by Pitcher Spud Chandler, his third hit of the game, two singles and an error by Lou Boudreau.

Chandler, gaining credit for his fifth victory against one defeat, had a shut out till the eighth. Then the Indians nudged him for a run and in the ninth Ray Mack homered with one on, causing Johnny Murphy to come onto the scene and snuff out additional trouble.

Rookie Charley Wensloff went the route in the second game and limited the Tribe to six hits, but two of these were double by Oris Hockett and Boudreau for a run in the fourth and in the seventh Jeff Heath's single and Roy Cullenbine's double added the other Cleveland counter.

The Yanks scored in the first inning on three walks and Nick Etten's single and in the fourth when Joe Heving walked George Stirnweiss while the bases were loadd. Allie Reynolds came to the mound for the Indians in the fifth and was the victim of the homer by Weatherly, former Cleveland veteran. The scores:

Reds Lose Their Fifth Straight Sunday Twin-Bill

Brooklyn Dodgers Register 6-0 and 10-6 Wins over Cincinnati

CINCINNATI, May 30—(AP)—Sunday baseball, particularly doubleheaders, continue to be the thorn in the side of the Cincinnati Reds today as they lost their fifth consecutive doubleheader, the Brooklyn Dodgers winning before 22,146 fans by scores of 6 to 0 and 10 to 6.

Trouble came early for the Reds in the first game. In the initial frame, Arkie Vaughn singled, Dolph Camilli and Billy Herman walked to fill the bases and Mickey Owen thundered a double into right centerfield to score three runs.

Walters Leaves Mound

Bucky Walters, on the mound for the Reds, lasted until the seventh inning when Augie Galan's second home run of the year, Arkie Vaughn's single and Billy Herman's double scored two runs and drove him to the showers.

Throughout the game, Whitlow Wyatt's slow ball tantalized the Reds. Only four Queen City boys got on base, thre of them on hits and Eddie Miller on a walk—the only pass given up by Wyatt in the game.

The second contest was a wild affair with extra base hits rattling off the fences in the outer gardens with regularity.

Johnny Vander Meer, who started on the mound for the Reds, was sent to the showers in the fifth after giving up four runs. Clyde Shoun followed Vandy to the mound and in one inning followed him to the showers when he donated three runs on two walks, a double by Augie Galan and a single by Dolph Camilli.

Reds Shell Higby

Brooklyn added three more runs in the eighth with two singles, three bases on balls and an error by Steve Mesner, Red shortstop.

The Reds drove Kirby Higby out of the game in the third when they scored a run on three singles. They added two more in the fourth when Vander Meer's long double to right center scored Max Marshall and Dee Moore.

They made their last threat in the sixth, getting three runs on three doubles and a pair of singles to pull up within one run of the Dodgers. The scores:

GAME TOMORROW
Beall at Fort Hill.
(End of Season)

The Fort Hill Sentinels, who deadlocked the LaSalle High Explorers for the city scholastic baseball championship last week, will go after a share of the Tri-State Interscholastic Conference crown tomorrow afternoon when they meet the Beall High Mountaineers, of Frostburg, on the Fort Hill diamond here at 4 o'clock.

The Explorers have completed their season, winning eight of ten conference tussles. The Sentinels and Mountaineers are tied for second place a half game behind LaSalle with seven-two records. The winner of tomorrow's battle will move into a final standing tie with the Blue and Gold.

LaSalle officials already have announced that it will be impossible for the Explorers to meet Fort Hill in a playoff game for the city championship and the same conditions will prevent a playoff for the conference title.

Explorers' Season Over

The Explorers closed their season last week, the players have turned in equipment and Brother Justin, coach, left Cumberland yesterday for the remainder of the summer.

Coach "Bobby" Cavanaugh, of Fort Hill, has indicated he would like to send his team against LaSalle to break the city deadlock, but prefers to ignore the possibility of a conference tie until after tomorrow's game is out of the way.

Walter "Bill" Bowers, Allegany high athletic director and president of the conference, said the matter of "breaking the intra-city tie is one for the schools involved to settle." No rules are in effect, he said, to require a playoff to settle the city championship.

In the event of a tie for the conference championship, however, Bowers said the rules specify that schools involved in the deadlock cannot receive a leg on the trophy unless it is broken. The conference president said he'd like to see the schools reach an agreement but if they don't, it would be necessary for him to make a decision.

Sentinels Won Last Three

Beall tossers have won their last two starts after dropping tussles to LaSalle and Allegany for their only setbacks of the season. The Mountaineers started out with five straight triumphs, opening their campaign with a 9-8 win over LaSalle.

A 7-6 victory over Allegany in eight innings, a 15-10 conquest of Hyndman, an 11-3 triumph over Paw Paw and a 13-5 verdict over Fort Hill followed. Then, LaSalle brought the streak to an end with a 4-0 victory and Allegany blasted the Mountaineers 12-5. Beall then tripped Hyndman 7-5 and Paw Paw 8-6.

Fort Hill turned back Hyndman 5-3, Paw Paw 3-2, LaSalle 2-0 and Hyndman 21-2 before losing to Beall, 13-5 and LaSalle, 4-1. The Sentinels then came back to drub Allegany 18-9, Paw Paw 9-2 and Allegany 2-1.

Cardinals Win 3-2 After Losing 7-6

ST. LOUIS, May 30 (AP) — The New York Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals divided a double bill today — the Giants taking the opener, 7 to 6, and the Cards coming back, 3 to 2, in the nightcap.

Five-hit pitching by Murry Dickson and George Munger held the Gaints at bay in the second game, which Ray Sanders, the Cards' first baseman, sewed up with an eight-inning double good for two runs.

Lou Klein, rookie Card second baseman ran the string of consecutive games in which he was hit safely to twenty-one.

Although outhit, the Giants racked up a five-run sixth frame in the first game for their necessary margin — offsetting Sanders's ninth-inning homer with two mates aboard.

First Baseman Joe Orengo led the New Yorkers' assault with a home run and a double. The scores:

Red Sox Defeat Detroit, 3-0, 5-1

BOSTON, May 30 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox got back into the winning groove today by taking both ends of a doubleheader from the Detroit Tigers, winning the first, 3-0, behind "Dick" Newsome's six-hit pitching, and taking the nightcap, 5-1, on six hits off two Bengal pitchers.

It was Newsome's first victory of the season and in celebration Jim Tabor, whose hitting has been woeful of late, uncorked a fourth inning home run—the first by any Red Sox batter in Boston this season—and later connected for a double.

It looked like a split when Detroit grabbed a quick run in the first of the nightcap on two passes and an equal number of base hits, but the Red Sox went ahead in the sixth when Leon Culberson singled, Pete Fox doubled and Bob Doerr singled for a pair of runs.

After Johnny Gorsica relieved Starter Frank Overmire, Boston picked up three more in the seventh on a Tony Lupien triple, a Roy Partee double, two bases on balls, a wild pitch and an error by Third Baseman "Pinky" Higgins, of Detroit. The score:

Nicholson's Two Homers Help Cubs

CHICAGO, May 30 (AP) — The Chicago Cubs defeated the Boston Braves, 5 to 1, today before weather caused postponement of the second game of a doubleheader with the Cubs leading, 4 to 3, after three innings.

While a crowd of 25,207 looked on, Bill Nicholson blasted out two home runs in the opener to account for four of the Cubs' five runs. They were the only homers hit by any Cub this season.

Although clipped for ten hits, Paul Derringer was able to coast in to his second victory of the season. Al Javery gave up eight hits, four of which went for extra bases. After Javery had held the Cubs hitless in the first three innings, Nicholson homered with one on in the fourth and repeated the performance in the eighth. The box:

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Eggplant for Variety in the Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY

Eggplant will be included in many Victory gardens this year, for when properly cooked, it becomes a good meat substitute. Eggplant is a long season tender crop and should be given the warmest spot in the garden.

Most gardeners purchase the plants in preference to growing eggplants from seed. As a rule, plants about six inches tall are set out into the garden. Eggplant will withstand transplanting better if the young plants are given a thorough soaking in water the night before planting. They resent any disturbance of their roots.

As illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, place a small handful of fertilizer in a circle around each plant as they are set out and cultivate it in lightly. Later, if growth appears slow, repeat the application of fertilizer.

When the plants are about half grown a two or three-inch mulch placed around them will help to conserve the moisture in the soil and keep the roots in a healthy growing condition.

Eggplants can be stored for a considerable period of time in a cool, moist cellar, therefore a few extra plants should be set out at planting time. When the fruits are cut for storage several inches of the stem should be left attached to each fruit, as illustrated.

Always handle eggplants as though they actually were eggs, for the fruit is tender and bruises easily.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

DON'T ALLOW AN "OUT"

SUCCESS OF a lead-throwing end-play depends upon making certain that your opponent will lead back something which you desire him to lead. Many efforts along this line by average players fail because of inadequate preparation. Often they throw the opponent in at a time when he has an "out"—when there is some card he can lead without damage to his side. Eliminating that card from his hand will render him helpless.

(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ♥	Pass	5 NT
Pass	6 ♥	Pass	6 ♠

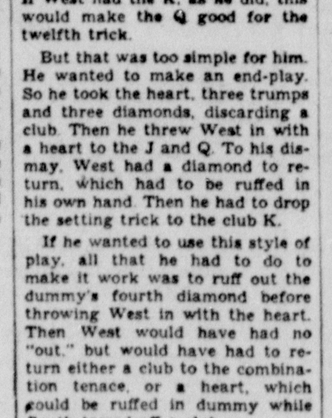

A player who likes to be a bit fancy was the declarer on this deal. When he counted up his tricks after West led the heart K, he saw there was a very simple play which he could try. He could win that opening trick with the heart A, drop the trumps in no more than three rounds, take three rounds of diamonds for a heart discard, come to his hand with a ruff of the fourth diamond and then lead a club toward the Q. If West had the K, as he did, this would make the Q good for the twelfth trick.

But that was too simple for him. He wanted to make an end-play. So he took the heart, three trumps and three diamonds, discarding a club. Then he threw West in with a heart to the J and Q. To his dismay, West had a diamond to return, which had to be ruffed in his own hand. Then he had to drop the setting trick to the club K.

If he wanted to use this style of play, all that he had to do to make it work was to ruff out the dummy's fourth diamond before throwing West in with the heart. Then West would have had no "out," but would have had to return either a club to the combination tenace, or a heart, which could be ruffed in dummy while South tossed off a club.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

If the defenders had done no bidding, and West leads the spade 4, how should South play this deal for 4-Hearts in rubber bridge?

SYNOPSIS

Notified that her brother, MELVIN MARSDEN, is missing in action, JEAN MARSDEN, who has risen to the top as a fashion model, quits her job to become secretary to STEVE LANDIS, director of a new rubber plant in Mexico. Jean has an abrupt introduction to carefree, handsome CURLEY, employed by MR. AND MRS. PARKINSON, owners of the Rancho Casolina. Jean appears to have roused the jealousy of ROSITA, pretty little Mexican girl who is in love with Curley.

YESTERDAY: Jean gets word that her brother, previously reported "missing," is a captive of the Germans.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

THE AFTERNOON passed in a nightmare of blank activity. Vaguely Jean looked forward to going back to her tiny hotel room and giving way to the pressure of grief building up within her. But even that consolation was denied her. At six o'clock, Steve came back from a tour of inspection of some machinery and stopped at her desk.

"I hate to ask you, Jean, but I've got to get out some work tonight. I wonder if you could help me a couple of hours?"

"Yes, of course," she said automatically.

"Fine." He looked at his wristwatch, considering. "In that case, it might be better to go out and get a bite to eat first."

Drearily she opened her lower drawer and reached for her dull green leather purse. While he closed his office door, she drew on a wide-brimmed leather hat. In her compact mirror she noted that her face was too pale. But she didn't care enough to bother to correct it.

Steve put her into the station wagon and drove down to the village. He parked before the one-story crumbling brown adobe with the brave gold and red sign, "Tony's." Tony, himself, met them at the door, a small, sad-faced Mexican, but with creases of laughter around his eyes. "The supper, she is exactly what you order!" he assured Steve, wiping his hands in an enthusiastic gesture on the long apron tied around his waist.

Jean murmured to Steve as she followed the little man to their booth, "But when did you order this?"

Steve grinned wryly. "Just before I went on the inspection tour," he admitted. "When I realized there might be work tonight . . ."

A warm breeze blew through an open window beside them. The sweet pungent smell of chilies and spices came from the kitchen.

Tony lit the candle at their table, and poured their wine with loving care. "It iss our best wine," he informed Jean with impressive solemnity. He waited until she had sipped it, to demand in a tone of mingled triumph and anxiety, "You like?"

"Very much," Jean said.

Beaming, the little man hurried out to bring in the chicken with rice, the lettuce and tomato salad.

"For a change," Steve said, "we are having no black beans."

"That is wonderful," Jean smiled. Music started from Tony's cherished orthophonic. "I'll bet that's his best music, too," she added.

The food was really good, the wine and music soothed and relaxed her. And Steve had apparently forgotten for the moment the world of rubber factories. He was telling her stories. Of an Italian place something like this in Trenton where his Princeton fraternity used to go for raviolis. Of the skit some of the fellows had written around it for their annual revue. He sang the ribald college ditty, about the beautiful tomatoes in the ravioli shop. "You didn't know me when I was a chorus girl," he laughed.

"I went to Princeton once for a prom," Jean told him. "About five years ago. I remember the dogwood was in bloom and the pink magnolias on the campus."

"I loved it in the winter, with the snow on those huge old trees," Steve mused. "And then just before commencement the senior sing on the steps of Old Nassau." He told her of graduating at the peak of the depression, of the classic struggles of a young engineer to find a spot. Of his first job.

And Jean found herself coming out of her dull stupor of grief into a larger prospective of shared memories. She told him of some of her own struggles. How she and her younger brother, Melvin, had set out for the "City of Opportunity" after her father's death. Of Melvin's newspaper work and her interesting job as secretary to a mogul in the steel business. And then the chance that Melvin had obtained for her to model for Henri. Her words turned more and more to Melvin. The flood of reminiscence was gradually releasing the tight band of her grief. In a moment of confidence she snapped open the back cover of her clip watch and showed Steve the humorous, freckle-faced likeness of her brother.

"He's—quite a guy," she whispered, her throat stiff with tears.

"I'll bet he is." Steve studied the picture closely. "He went to Africa as a reporter?"

"He was—doing a column. It was HIS big chance," she whispered. "Somehow—even though I have known for six weeks that he was missing, I didn't believe it. I thought he was out somewhere tracking down a scoop. But now—" She looked at Steve with pleading fear in her eyes. "I've heard such awful stories of the treatment of prisoners there. Especially, if the Nazis haven't liked all of his reports about them. And knowing Melvin, I doubt that they have."

"On the other hand," Steve said thoughtfully, "they sometimes accord reporters real respect and are more than willing to exchange them for Axis prisoners at the earliest opportunity."

"If I could only believe that," she whispered, desperately.

"The statement is based on facts, Steve said gently.

She smiled gratefully. He was doing his best to comfort her and the steady assurance of his words was helping.

"I think I know something now that has puzzled me from the start," Steve said slowly. "The reason for your leaving your career to go into defense work. You signed up when you heard your brother was missing."

She nodded wordlessly.

"Bravo," Steve said softly.

The three Mexican musicians had arrived now and were playing, in her honor, no doubt, "The Last Time I Saw Paris." Jean's eyes filled with tears. She could see Melvin coming around a corner of Lexington avenue, coat collar turned up against the wind, whistling this tune.

"I wish," she cried in sudden urgent pain, "that I could go over there myself and—and fight them! I wish I weren't so darned helpless!"

"You are fighting them, you know," Steve's voice reminded her gently. "Most effectively. Every pound of rubber we send is just that much resistance . . . will end this whole horrible business that much sooner."

"I know." She noticed the large clock above the door with sudden guilt. "Oh, we should be back at the office. Your work—"

Steve shook his head, a guilty smile lifting the corners of his mouth as he offered her a cigaret. "There isn't any special work," he admitted. "I didn't think you ought to be alone this evening, and because of our little misunderstanding over the Parkinsons I was afraid you'd refuse me if I asked you to dinner outright."

She regarded him with an answering smile as he leaned across to light her cigaret. "You are nice," she said. Then, after an interval, she added thoughtfully, "About the Parkinsons—or anyone else, Steve. If they were helping the Axis in any way, I'd be the first to want them caught now. If it will help any, I won't go out there again until things are straightened out."

"On the other hand," Steve was measuring her with a thoughtful gaze, "it might be a smarter thing for you to accept their invitation to be their house guest for the next several weeks."

Jean's eyes widened in slow distaste. "You mean," she said softly, "as a—a spy?"

"Let's say rather to assure ourselves of their innocence," Steve said slowly.

Vacation Church Schools in Need Of More Leaders

Program Can Be a Boon to Any Neighborhood, Dr. Myers Says

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

The summer vacation church school can be a boon to any neighborhood. Usually it is open, without pay, to any child whose parents wish him to attend. While some time is devoted to Bible study and religious teaching, there also is, as a rule, considerable directed play, dramatic expression and creative activities, adapted to the child's development.

Practically always this school is directed by a capable woman, often by a teacher who, for the love of children, gives up her vacation time. The director should, of course, be a person who understands children and can manage them well. It cannot be a success without proper order. Just for the children to be with a woman of ideals and refinement is very wholesome. As in a good Sunday school, it's the silent influence of the teacher that counts far more than what she teaches.

At a vacation school, the child learns reverence during the worship period. He learns stories from the Bible and other choice literature. He hears some of them read or told over and over.

Boon for Working Mothers

The child in this school is protected from the physical and moral hazards of the street. It is a special boon for the children of working mothers. I wish that special effort might be made this summer to enroll these children.

While not many children over ten or twelve will attend, many girls from twelve to fifteen might be attracted to help in the vacation church school. They could read to young children in small groups and guide them in simple dramatics and games, and in making things. In any such school, from five to ten girls might profitably assist. See the value of these girls from such contribution.

I wish that thousands of other girls would, during the summer spend a few hours a day with small groups of young boys and girls right in the block reading to them, making things with them, and guiding them in playing games, especially of a non-running sort. With the approval of each child's parents, the girl might meet these young children on her home porch or lawn or at a neighbor's home.

Program for Vacation Schools

Already some denominational groups have launched a program for vacation church schools this summer. In some cities, the various churches have worked out together a co-operative program.

I wish many religious leaders would be thinking now of ways and means to continue this type of school all the year round, daily after school, and on Saturday till such time as child-caring centers for children of working mothers are established by the public schools.

Many more trained leaders are needed for this type of work. Many young mothers who have had some training in teaching should attend a college or university this summer for this purpose, in case they can have safe care of their own children in the meanwhile.

My special bulletin addressed to working mothers may be had in the usual way.

Solving Parent Problems

Q. Would you have a little child say pieces and the like before company?

A. No.

Q. Can a youth in high school or college enter too many activities outside of classes?

A. Yes; all too many do. They need protection by the school and home working together against this excessive strain on their physical and nervous energy. In some places the school is definitely limiting the number of extra-curricular activities a youth may engage in at school.

War Sacrifices Won't Be in Vain, McMullen Says

Maryland Legion Commander Delivers Memorial Day Address

Daniel F. McMullen, Maryland Department commander, American Legion, in a Memorial day address yesterday in Rose Hill cemetery, said that in Nazi-occupied France there are five American cemeteries built by a grateful American people for the sacrifices of our American soldiers. Today these sacred plots of American soil are behind the lines of the cruel Nazi oppressors.

"To the spirit of our dead who rest there we send you this message," McMullen said. "America and all her Allies are on the march back to fair France in the fight to free all mankind and to restore the freedom and dignity of man.

"The soil which we hold sacred will be once again free and the complete end of the threat against freedom, equality and liberty will be part of the debt which we owe those dead who fought for those ideals in the last conflict."

Rain Dampens Paraders

McMullen said that Roane Waring, national commander of the Legion, has just returned from a tour of the North African battlefields and he saw rows and rows of crosses marking the dead of the present conflict "reminding us that once more we are in the midst of a war in which Americans are giving their flesh and blood to uphold our God-given rights of freedom."

Each year the Legion "solemnly renews its pledge to their honored dead who died in battle to preserve our freedom and way of life. Now we are engaged in another conflict which sees Americans paying part of the installment on the debt we owe to those who gave their life in past battles to keep our nation free," McMullen said.

Preceding the ceremonies at the soldier's plot in Rose Hill, five divisions marched in a parade from the state armory to the cemetery. A shower of rain just after the marchers started their trek dampened the spectators and marchers alike.

Program Outlined

The program at the soldier's plot was as follows:

Selection by the Moose band; invocation by the Rev. J. F. Zimmerman; selection by Allegany high school band; prayer by the Rev. David C. Clark, chaplain of the Maryland State Guard; address by Daniel F. McMullen, Maryland department commander of the American Legion.

American Legion ceremony by G. Ray Lippold, post commander, assisted by Thomas R. Farrell, post chaplain, and Paul C. Weisenmiller, sergeant-at-arms; selection by Fort Hill high school band; benediction by the Rev. E. G. A. Snyder; military salute by the Maryland State Guard; "Taps" sounded by buglers in charge of Joseph M. Fradiska; program at the grave of Henry Hart by Henry Hart Post, V.F.W., with ceremony being conducted by James E. Stemple.

The services will be broadcast by radio station WTBO.

Following the custom of other years, the American Legion decorated the graves of veterans. This was in charge of John R. Kelly, chairman of the graves decoration committee.

At each cemetery there will be a supply of flags for graves that have been overlooked.

Seven State Troopers Attain Expert Rating In Pistol Qualifications

Seven state troopers stationed at Barracks "C", LaVale, qualified as experts during the pistol qualifications fired on the barracks range last week. Two others qualified as marksmen.

Members of the force making expert scores are First Sgt. John H. Doud, 270; Trooper First Class A. M. Spioch, 277; Troopers G. M. Browning, 283; G. S. Dunlap, 269; J. F. White, 267; B. J. Buckel, 261; and M. F. Beamer, 261.

Qualifying as marksmen were Sgt. Harold C. Carl, 237, and Corp. Thomas Curris, 218.

Allegany Yearbook Will Be Distributed Today

Dedicated to the Allegany graduates serving in the armed forces, the Allegewi, 1943 yearbook, will make its appearance today, according to an announcement by Ralph R. Webster, principal.

Among the special features in the annual are a section covering the student victory program activities and art work done by William Raupach, a member of the graduating class. Frances Rudd and Rosalie Williams are co-editors of the book and Miss Veronica Kompanek is adviser.

Mr. Webster announced that graduates may obtain their books by reporting to their former homerooms today, preferably this morning.

Correction

A news item several days ago which stated that Luther Metz, 15, of Barton, had been injured in the Metz Coal Company mine was incorrect. The boy was injured while helping a coal truck driver unload a truck of coal in Cumberland. His arm was caught between the back of the truck and a coal house. The News regrets the error.

Labor Conference Discusses Plans For Child Care

Calling attention to the urgent problem created for working mothers by the fact that schools will close soon with no provision having been made for extended school programs, the Western Maryland Labor Unity Conference last week voted to set up a Labor Child Welfare Committee to meet June 11 and consider problems of workers' children.

The Western Maryland CIO Council will appoint four delegates to the committee, the Allegany Trades Council will appoint four, and the railroad brotherhoods and independent organizations will send four between them.

The proposal was brought before the Conference by Mrs. Marian Davis of the CIO Women's Auxiliary, who pointed out that under the Lanham act the federal Government will match local funds for extended school care dollar for dollar. Money can sometimes be provided out of special contingent funds, she indicated, and this money is well spent if it keeps children off the streets and in constructive activity under supervision, she added.

The Labor Child Welfare committee will give special attention to the problem of adapting the day care centers, soon to be opened, to the needs of working mothers. Discussion indicated that the centers must open early and close late, and that transportation must be provided to pick up the children, if the working mothers are to make the fullest use of their facilities.

Council Will Hear Plans for Zoning Commision Here

Ordinance Will Be Presented by Heskett at Meeting Tomorrow

An ordinance to create a municipal planning and zoning commission will be presented by City Attorney Charles Z. Heskett to the mayor and city council for action at tomorrow's meeting.

Heskett has also obtained assurance from a representative of the United States Department of the Interior that the city will be granted easement rights from time to time in the C. and O. canal property owned by the federal government.

According to the city attorney, the city cannot undertake extensive planning unless it established a planning commission as provided by state law. The proposed ordinance would establish a commission of five members with the mayor acting as an ex-officio member during his two-year term. Subject to the approval of the council the mayor is authorized to appoint the other four members.

To Serve Without Pay

The members must represent manufacturing, professional, general business and labor groups, and will serve without pay. Terms for the first four members shall be for two, three, four and five years, respectively. The city engineer, planning engineer and solicitor are required to aid the commission as their services are required.

Acting upon the council's approving a $10,000 appropriation for planning relative to flood control, Heskett wrote to Rep. J. Glenn Beall about the need for Cumberland to secure certain rights in the canal property, which must be involved in municipal developments.

Beall Helps Obtain Rights

Beall contacted the department of the interior and on Friday Irving C. Root, superintendent of national capital parks, visited Heskett here and gave assurance that the department will grant the city perpetual easement rights as they are needed.

The rights will cover permission to repair the tow path to prevent water from backing into the city and to alter the dam. Root said that the interior department will deal with the requests separately and act so as to tie in developments with possible federal improvement in the property.

Oiling of Seven County Roads Is Approved

County Commissioners Sell $40,000 Bond Issue to Philadelphia Firm

Oiling of seven roads in Allegany county was approved by the board of county commissioners at their meeting Friday.

As submitted by Douglas P. LeFevre and Leo T. Downey, maintenance and district engineers for the state roads commission, the roads, mileage and costs will be as follows:

Brady Lane, .45 of a mile, $443.52; Pinto road, .76 of a mile, $1,705.50; Morgan-Coney-Carlos lane, 1.55 miles, $1,527.60; Hoffman Hol-Cherry lane, 2.34 miles, $2,306.28; Midlothian road 1.14 miles, $1,284; Pleasant Valley, 2.2 miles, $4,065.75; and Williams road, 2.4 miles, $2,365.32.

The costs for oiling are paid by the state roads commission.

Bond Issue Sold

Six bids were received for the county's $40,000 bond issue for refund of money advanced Memorial hospital for construction purposes, and the county commissioners awarded the issue to the firm of Newburger and Hanno, Philadelphia. According to their bid, the bonds bear an interest rate of one and six-tenths per cent, and bring 100.796. Beginning in 1962 they will be retired annually at the rate of $5,000 annually. All of the rejected bids were from Baltimore firms.

A delegation of residents of the Woodlawn section of LaVale appeared before the board of commissioners with a plan to remove the flood danger created by a sharp bend in Braddock Run.

The delegation requested that the county pay half the costs of employing a steam shovel to remove the bend, straighten the course of the stream and thus remove the danger of the exposing the Woodlawn section to the next flow of high waters.

Property Is Endangered

As explained by the delegation, not only their property is in danger, but the road adjacent to the stream is also suffering from its force at the point of the bend. Commissioners Green and Holmes agreed to inspect the site and action on the request was deferred until after their visit. Commissioner Wilkinson had visited the area on Tuesday.

Marcellus Llewellyn, whose request for improvements to a road leading to his farm on Dan's Mountain received no final action by the commissioners on Tuesday, appeared before the board yesterday and reopened his case. He denied the contention of Commissioners Green and Holmes at Tuesday's meeting that the road was private.

When asked about the gate and "no trespassing" signs that have been used on the road, Llewellyn said that he had put them up during hunting seasons, even though the road was a county road. The commissioners instructed him to remove the gate and said that they would then consider approving improvements in the road.

Races at Fairgo Depend on Lifting Of Driving Ban

New President Announces Tentative Dates as August 3 to 14

The annual Cumberland fair and races at Fairgo will be held from August 3 to 14, if the present ban on pleasure driving is lifted, according to Clifton W. White, president and general manager of the Cumberland Fair Association.

White, recently elected to succeed the late Harry A. Manley, said that the track is in tip-top condition and that the buildings are in first class repair except for some fresh painting which is usually done prior to the opening of the fair and races each year.

Under the present ban on pleasure driving, Mr. White said it would not be advisable to have either the fair or the races. But if the ban is lifted any time before the middle of July, the two weeks' event will be held, starting August 3. President White is directing matters so that there will be no long period of preparation required to swing into a "season as usual." Official confirmation is expected this week of August 3 to 14 as the dates for the Cumberland track.

No changes in personnel have been made at Fairgo, Mr. White said.

A native of Cumberland, he operated a stationery and office supply store starting in 1901, formed a partnership with Frank H. Ankeney under the firm name of White and Ankeney. He retired from business and became associated with Mr. Manley in 1927, and served 15 years as superintendent at Fairgo. He was a city commissioner (water and light) in 1928-29. Soon after Mr. Manley's death, he was named his successor as president and general manager of the fair association, and still acts as Fairgo superintendent also. He was recently elected a member of the Maryland State Fair Board.

County Farmers Are Urged To Increase Wood Pulp Production

County farmers are urged to make plans for the utilization of their farm labor and materials for the production of pulp wood which is now considered as important as the production of any other farm commodity, according to word received here by County Agent Ralph F. McHenry.

The need for increased pulp wood supplies is of vital importance, McHenry said, and it is up to the farmers to make it an essential part of their farm produce.

The selective service is giving consideration, for temporary agricultural deferment in order that the wood pulp crops may be harvested. Accordingly, the ruling has been made that fifteen cords of pulp wood in four foot lengths may be considered as one unit of credit toward agricultural deferment.

Father Bonomo's topic, "Peace after the War," was forcefully delivered. He cited the need for religious education and training in our public as well as parochial schools, to bring about a better understanding and administration of a just peace after the war.

Instances of religious education sponsored by non-Catholic clergy in the states of New York and Pennsylvania, in some of their public schools were pointed out as encouraging steps to afford religious instruction for many who may otherwise be deprived altogether of knowledge of God.

Rationing Rules Affect Production Of Country Butter

County Supply Threatened by Failure of Farmers To Meet Regulations

In order to combat the decrease in production of country butter Allegany county caused by misunderstanding of rationing as applied to the sale of such butter, representatives of the county farm agent's office have undertaken a program to inform all butter-producers of the rationing regulations.

According to County Farm Agent Ralph F. McHenry, there are a large number of county farmers who, whether because they have not heard or read of the regulations or because they think the rules do not apply to them, may innocently be engaged in black market. Some, he stated, think that they need not collect stamps when they sell to stores, while others are trading any kind of stamps that the buyers hand them.

Since he believes that most of the rationing violations occur through ignorance or misunderstanding of the requirements, McHenry expects the instructional program to remedy the situation.

Butter Supply In Danger

The possibility of black market is not the only danger involved, McHenry points out. Because many people are not capable of handling figures, or because they are afraid of doing the wrong thing or perhaps because it is too much trouble to collect, record and report stamps and points, there is a great tendency on the part of county farmers to stop making butter.

As a result they are sending their cream to markets out of the county and state, killing off their calves and endangering the butter supply here. The flow of outside butter would not be sufficient to provide the amount the county would be entitled to, and a shortage would result caused by conditions within the county itself.

McHenry says that the butter producers must do three things: first they must be sure to collect eight points per pound of butter sold on red stamps, whether the butter is sold to consumers or stores; second they must report the number of pounds sold each month to the rationing board in Cumberland within fifteen days after the end of each month; and third, they must turn in points with the report to cover the amount sold.

Neighborhood War Groups Form

In order to reach all farmers in the county, McHenry has organized Neighborhood War Groups. There are approximately eighty of these groups in the county and through them every farm can be contacted and informed of the regulations. The groups are classed in nine general sections according to location and one man and one woman have been named as key leaders. These are responsible for the instruction in their sections through actual contact with every farm family.

The sections and their key leaders are as follows: Orleans, A. Schaeffer and Mrs. Ruland Gilson; Oldtown, Ross Shaw and Miss Nellie Thomas; Flintstone, Mar Gordon and Mrs. Blaine Robinett; Union Grove, W. H. Johnson and Mrs. R. J. Minke; North Branch, Williams road, Delbert Valenti and Mrs. J. C. Newcomb; Mt. Savage, Earl T. Lepley and Mrs. J. Weimer; Potomac Valley, J. William Loar and Mrs. H. G. Grimm; Frostburg, Charles S. Harvey and Mrs. Marcellus Llewellyn; Bartow, Lonaconing, Evan Meese and Mrs. Arthur Phillips.

Jobs Are Available For Women Whose Husbands Are in Service

Women between the ages of 18 and 40 whose husbands have entered the service and women who husbands are eligible for induction at some future date are urged to register for essential work in war plants by Dan R. Staley, manager of the United States Employment Service office here.

Staley said that women who are dexterous with their hands are especially needed in local war plants for work on precision machines. Women who are employed in non-essential work at present are asked to register for work in war plants as the manpower situation is daily growing more acute.

Women who have returned to the homes of their parents since their husbands have left for military service but are not employed should be among those who sign up for war work, Staley said. Many persons do not realize the importance of turning out war materials as they are to remote from actual battle fronts, he stated, but what production we have in the next six months will determine the success or failure of our pending offensive against the Axis.

Staley said that principals of county high schools have been contacted and asked to inform all graduates of this year's classes who are over 18 years of age to register for work. Many girls are thus made available for employment in local war plants but the boys who are 18 will probably be in the army within the next two months.

City To Borrow

William McDonald, finance commissioner, was authorized by the mayor and council Friday to borrow up to $40,000 for the general account to provide the city with funds until tax money begins to come in. He was also empowered to secure bids on insurance for the fleet of city vehicles.
